CRACKERS IN TINS

A New St. Louis Invention.

The wide-awake and ever-progressive Baking Establishment of DOZIER-WEYL CRACKER CO., through their Mr. L. D. Dozier, have recently invented and are rapidly introducing what is destined to be a grand thing—a regular "bonanza" for them, as well as a perfect godsend for all consumers of Crackers. The invention consists of a combined Wood and Tin Box for Crackers, and the great advantage this package holds over the old wood box is that Crackers so packed remain for weeks as crisp, fresh and nice as if just from the oven, a thing that cannot be said of the wood package. In damp weather Crackers in wood absorb moisture, and in but a few days become soft, clammy and more or less unpalatable. Packed in tin, they are always crisp, as above said. Now that this enterprising house have introduced this novel package, a new era is upon this industry, and in but a few weeks it will be hard to find a good housekeeper who has not a can of Crackers in the house, a custom that exists almost universally in the New England States—the land of good housekeepers. This firm's new Royal Snowflakes we can recommend from personal knowledge as being the most delicious Cracker we have ever eaten, and they are now sold by all Grocers that are live enough to keep what the people want. Try a 7-lb. can, and be convinced. They are simply superb!

SECRET HISTORY.

Dorsey Gives the Details of the Garfield Campaign.

More than $2,060,000 was Raised and Used, with Garfield's Knowledge, Nearly Half of the Money in Indiana—The Celebrated Fifth Avenue Conference—Why John Sherman Compelled Hayes to Veto the Funding Bill—Dorsey Protests Against MacVeagh's Appointment.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The Sun to-day contains a dispatch from Washington which gives what purports to be extracts from the budget of Stephen W. Dorsey, showing the pledges Garfield made to secure his election. It begins by saying: "The sequence of some events that had their beginning with the nomination of Garfield was ended with the verdict in the recent Star Route trials. Two of the defendants in these trials were so intimately connected with the Republican canvass of 1880, and one of them at least, so connected because of his relations with the Star Route contractors, that the very remarkable history of that canvass has been really in their power to tell. They have both refrained from doing so, because they were under fire, and because they knew that they had the sympathy of many of the leading Republican politicians. Both Brady and Dorsey have over and over again received assurances from these managers of sympathy, not infrequently

COUPLED WITH THE ASSERTION that no case of ingratitude is known that compares with that of the administration, which was not only willing but anxious to secure all the aid these two defendants could give during the canvass, and then, having obtained that aid, was willing to turn around and persecute them. Whatever wrong there may have been in the Star Route contract system, the Republican managers in 1880 either knew or suspected, and they were then ready to get such advantages therefrom as were possible. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that both Dorsey and Brady feel to-day anything but gratitude toward the party they did so much to keep in power, nor can the defendants in the recent trials be held as specially unfaithful if from them some of the very remarkable results of the most remarkable canvass are learned. Brady's knowledge of Indiana politics was constantly brought into requisition, and he was begged, pleaded with and almost ordered to receive money from these very Star route contractors for the purposes of the campaign. To both Gen. Garfield and the party managers constantly acknowledged their obligation. To both Gen. Garfield at least had expressed his opinion that there was nothing unlawful in the

STAR ROUTE BUSINESS.

Such men as Hubbell, Jewell, Gen. Arthur and others had said that the Star Route contractors ought to be required to contribute liberally, because they were getting large sums for their work through the favor of the Government. When Congress ordered an investigation into the system of letting Star Route contracts Garfield, at Brady's request, made a thorough examination of the matter and assured Brady and Dorsey that he was satisfied the system could be defended and promised his support, but when the matter came up before the house he (Garfield) paired off and failed to assist them. All this occurred some months before the Chicago convention. It was well known that Brady favored the

NOMINATION OF BLAINE,

while Dorsey professed to be earnestly for Grant. The story goes on to say that Garfield's name was first mentioned for the Presidency by a club organized in Philadelphia by Wharton Barkes, for the purpose of preventing the nomination of Grant or Blaine. When Garfield was spoken of, Wayne MacVeagh, a member of the club, opposed him on the ground that his record in connection with the Credit Mobilier and De Golyer matters would act against him. Dorsey and Garfield heard of these remarks and it is said that MacVeagh always attributed Garfield's knowledge of the facts to Dorsey. Then came the Chicago convention and the NOMINATION OF GARFIELD.

Both Garfield and Dorsey realized very early in the canvass that the Republican candidate for the Presidency was embarrassed by a sulky, jealous and mutinous faction. The relation that the New York Stalwarts permitted themselves to assume was the subject of much correspondence between Garfield and Dorsey. The candidate wrote to Dorsey that he relied upon him to prepare the way for the cordial cooperation of the sulky New York men. He declared to Dorsey that he regarded him as one of the best of organizers, and that if he would undertake the work of reconciliation, it could be consummated. Dorsey promised to do it. He frankly told Garfield that it was a work that amounted to nothing less than organizing a movement for victory from elements that right after Garfield's nomination promised only defeat.

IT WAS DORSEY

who conceived and successfully managed the Fifth Avenue Hotel conference, and he himself has said that not even his recent trial as a criminal conspirator against the Government gave him more anxiety or more necessity for calling upon all his resources than did the arrangements for that conference. Dorsey had presented to the Republican managers, including Garfield, his views respecting the canvass. To his thinking, there were two necessities. One was money; the other, the cooperation of the New York Stalwarts. The two were linked. Dorsey said that no money could be raised without the cooperation of the New York men, and, on the other hand, with that cooperation, combined with certain honeyed inducements, any amount could be raised. Dorsey from the first urged the necessity of making

THE BATTLE IN INDIANA

in October. In this view, General Brady, who knew Indiana from the lakes to the Ohio, agreed. Garfield did not know how the money was to be raised. Dorsey did, and he told Garfield that he must meet the New York politicians, told him in the plainest terms that he must come to New York, that the New Yorkers would not run after him, and that he must come to them. So Garfield at last consented. The Fifth Avenue Hotel conference was arranged. Conkling had promised to be present, but he was the only one of those who were expected to take part in the conference who kept away. Garfield had been greatly impressed by Dorsey's earnestness, and when he met the representatives of the great Stalwart faction in

THE FIFTH AVENUE PARLOR

he made a plain statement to the politicians that New York had the right to expect the largest recognition at his hands. He promised to appoint Levi P. Morton, Secretary of the Treasury, and further it is asserted that he agreed that the operation of refunding the Government fives and sixes, which must soon take place, should be given to such a syndicate of New York bankers as should be designated by the Stalwarts and at such commission as should be fair. The operation, as has since been shown, was an enormous one. The bargain was made. The Stalwarts had sold out for a price, all but one.

MR. CONKLING,

as those who ought to know best them and now believe, had learned of this proposed bargain for the refunding of the bonds, and cared not to have part or share in it. So he kept away from that conference. In constant communication with Garfield, Dorsey began to organize for an October victory in Indiana. Dorsey's plan involved the most thorough canvass of the State of Indiana that had been made since the vigorous days of O. P. Morton. Every voter was enrolled, and the first canvass showed that the State was hopelessly Democratic. In the latter part of September, after Dorsey's organization had been perfected, after every voter had been placed, and the influences that could be brought to bear on each voter had been thoroughly learned, a special messenger left New York for Indianapolis. He had with him over $400,000, either in cash or in convertible paper. This money had all been raised in New York, and principally by the efforts of Levi P. Morton. Dorsey of the money, though urged to see to its distribution personally. He was there not only to see to it that his plan of organization was followed to the letter, but also to prevent, so far as possible, any of the money from sticking in the pockets of men who were trusted to distribute it. When the money reached the local committees it was found to be largely in crisp, new $2 bills. It is believed that Mr. John C. New could tell how bills and drafts of large denomination were thus converted into bills of this denomination. At all events there they were. They were distributed through the State just as ballots were, in great bunches. The destination of each was perfectly well known, and by noon of election day they had fallen like snow flakes silently all over the State, although more in some parts than in others. Then came the count of the polls in the evening. The $2 bills and combined with Dorsey's plan of organization, had won. More money was wanted in Indiana for the November election, and Jay Hubbell then went to Brady, then Second Assistant Postmaster-General, and told him that the Star Route contractors must subscribe $40,000. Brady refused to have anything to do with raising the amount, unless he had something to fall back on in case of trouble, in view of the order issued by Hayes. Hubbell went to Hayes, but the latter refused to write any letter to Brady. Finally Garfield, under Dorsey's direction, wrote the queer and notorious "My Dear Hubbell" letter. In it there is the expression, "Ask Brady how the departments are doing," and this was intended to be a hint and a request upon which Brady would act. When Brady first saw it he treated it with contempt. He thought he saw in it a willingness on the part of the candidate to

NEVER TOUCHED A PENNY

THE $432,000.

MAKE A CATSPAW

of him. But he finally consented to collect the money. With the letter as an authority, he did collect a large sum of money, part of which he took to Indiana, where it was spent, with Garfield's knowledge, by himself, and where it would do the most good. More than two million dollars were raised in all for the campaign, and a canvass that had been characterized by constant bargain and sale between the factions of the party and between certain capitalists and the candidate was brought to a successful result by means of the advances obtained. The second campaign in Indiana, while not so costly as the first, was very expensive, while in New York and Kings county the same line of argument was most effectively used. An outside influence stepped in during the winter, and one which neither Garfield or Dorsey reckoned upon, and made it impossible for one of the agreements. Congress had passed the funding law, which was to be the basis of the profitable refunding operation for the New York syndicate that had been agreed on at the Fifth Avenue conference. There was, however, a man at the head of the Treasury Department who not only believed that the successful candidate for the Presidency had been treacherous to him at Chicago, but who had also learned of the Fifth Avenue agreement. This secretary, Mr. John Sherman, dwielded Hayes as he willed, and Hayes, at Sherman's demand, vetoed the funding bill. Garfield knew and Dorsey knew that Sherman had accomplished two purposes with that veto. Thus it will be seen that through no fault of Garfield the agreement was not kept. Early in the winter of 1881 Gen. Garfield offered to Dorsey a place in his Cabinet. He had not only early decided

GARFIELD TO CABBY OUT

TO APPOINT BLAINE

Secretary of State, but there is good reason for the suspicion that has been entertained that it was the understanding that this should be done when Blaine's vote was transferred to Garfield at Chicago. Dorsey knew of this intention and regarded the appointment as one with which no great fault could be found. But, though Dorsey declined this, saying to the President-elect that there was no appointive place in the gift of anyone which he would accept, still Garfield hoped to induce him to reconsider. As late as February Garfield is reported by a Republican politician, who met him at Mentor, to have told him that he had decided to appoint ex-Senator Dorsey Secretary of the Interior. But if Dorsey into the Cabinet himself he was free to make frequent and very positive recommendations respecting the proposed make-up of the Cabinet. It was Dorsey who learned early in the winter that Garfield had other understandings than that with the Stalwarts at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, and that these would compel him to appoint his Secretary of the Treasury from the West. He had intimated early to Mr. Morton that he would be appointed Minister to France, and with this Mr. Morton had to be content. With Allison's appointment as Secretary of the Treasury, Dorsey found no fault after he was certain that the appointment would not go to New York. Late in February he received his first intimation that Garfield expected to carry out his obligations to the New York Stalwarts by appointing Col. James Postmaster-General, and that he also had in view the appointment of Wayne MacVeagh as Attorney-General, as Pennsylvania's share in the rewards, and as an acknowledgment to Don Cameron. When Dorsey learned this, he protested in the most vigorous English. Mr. James was telegraphed for to come over from New York. He came and met Gen. Garfield at the Riggs House on the 3d of March.

IN AN ADJOINING ROOM

sat Mr. Dorsey, though it is probable that Mr. James did not know this. Mr. Dorsey subsequently summarized the conversation that Mr. James had with Garfield. He had informed Garfield that he was not an aspirant for a place in the Cabinet, but that if Gen. Garfield saw fit to appoint him he should enter not as a Stalwart, not as a Grant man, not an Arthur man, nor a Conkling man, but should be a Garfield adherent through and through. Gen. Garfield seemed entirely satisfied with this. When Mr. James quitted the parlor he met Senator Dorsey in the hall. He said that he was going around to Conkling's rooms, in Fourteenth street, and Senator Dorsey went with him. Senator Conkling was there. In the interview that followed Mr. Dorsey said he heard Mr. James say to Conkling that he had told Gen. Garfield that he was not a candidate for any Cabinet place, that he was entirely satisfied with his place in New York, but that, as Gen. Garfield had indicated an intention of appointing him, to have it understood that in going into the Cabinet he could only go as the representative of Mr. Conkling and the Stalwarts. When Mr. James had gone Mr. Dorsey repeated to Conkling the prior conversation with Garfield as he believed that he heard it. Dorsey, when he learned what the Cabinet was to be, bade Garfield good-bye, wished him success with his Cabinet, and soon betook himself to his cattle ranche in New Mexico. He was nearly $15,000 out of pocket, his advice had gone for naught, but he went away with the prestige of having, in a great measure, won the campaign of 1880. Then came the appointment of Robertson as Collector of New York, followed by the resignation of Conkling and Platt, and the fight in the New York Legislature.

HE WISHED

THE RUPTURE

was accomplished by the resignation of Conkling and Platt, while McVeagh and James, having failed to bring about a reconciliation, plunged vigorously into the Star Route investigation. The news reached Dorsey at his Chico Springs ranche. Surprised and angry, he hurried to Washington to see what it meant. With his counsel, Col. Ingersoll, he called on MacVeagh for a conference and an explanation, and was staggered to hear the Attorney-General say that he expected to send him to the penitentiary. Then he went to the White House. He asked Garfield if he proposed to allow his administration to be used to gratify the malice of one of its members, and against him, who as the President had over and over again assured him, had done more than all others to bring about a victory for the party the previous fall. Dorsey further said that he was entirely willing to have his connection with the Star Route contracts thoroughly sifted, and if anything wrong was found therein he would stand the consequences. "But," said he, "I don't want to have it done by a man with a personal malice to serve." Garfield heard him through, and then went up to him, put his arm around him and said:

"Steve, old boy, don't worry; go back to your ranch."

He also said to him that he had the whole business thoroughly in his own hands, where he proposed to keep it.

DORSEY WENT AWAY

greatly relieved. He had, however, hardly got home before news came that distressed him. He learned that MacVeagh soon expected to get an indictment against him. Back he came to Washington. Garfield was much annoyed by his lack of confidence in him. He told Dorsey that not a step was taken without his knowledge, and he told him that if he would be at his room at a certain hour that evening he would send a transcript of all the evidence that was done. Dorsey and Brady both had a strong friend in the administration. Blaine, while moving very circumspectly, felt very bitterly about the treatment they were receiving. He had, besides, his own grievances, arising from MacVeagh's almost outspoken hostility, and he early began to prepare the way for the speedy retirement of MacVeagh and James from the Cabinet. So much fuss had been made about the Star Route cases that it was thought unwise to shut down on all proceedings at once, but the whole business was

TO BE SLOWLY STRANGLED

and gradually to be allowed to disappear from public sight. MacVeagh knew this and he also had reason to believe that on the morning of July 3, 1881, when Garfield rode to the depot with Blaine, the interesting conversation in which they were engaged had reference to early changes in the offices of Attorney General and Postmaster General. Guiteau's shot caused the Star Route prosecutions to be handed over as a legacy from the old to the new administration. The history of the prosecution by General Arthur's administration is long, and in some respects as remarkable as that which has just been told.

THE SUNDAY LAW.

Its Enforcement in Kansas City and Jefferson City.

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 16.—Yesterday was the quietest and most generally observed Sunday in the history of Kansas City. Every saloon and hotel bar, with one exception, closed its doors at twelve o'clock on Saturday night, and remained closed until twelve o'clock last night. The exception was the bar in Clay Crenshaw's hotel, which remained open and did an immense business. The saloon men declare they will make the Sunday law so odious that the citizens will demand its non-observance. In order to do this they will insist upon a general suspension of business of all kinds on Sunday.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., July 16.—In accordance with a resolution adopted on Saturday night by the saloon-keepers' meeting, all the saloons here remained closed yesterday. Livery stables, cigar stores, barber shops, in fact all places which generally remain open on Sunday were closed. The only tradespeople who were allowed to keep open were the butchers who had stocks of fresh meat on hand which would have been lost had they been forced to close. The Tribune and the newsdealers were also notified, and in consequence the Sunday edition of the Tribune and the St. Louis papers were not delivered to subscribers. The manager of the telegraph office and the manager of the telephone office were also notified to close, but no attention was paid to the notification and these offices remained open during the usual hours. All of these notices emanated from the saloon-keepers, who also appointed a committee to see that no business is transacted or shops kept open on Sunday in future. When the mail train from St. Louis arrived at noon an attempt was made to prevent the sale of St. Louis papers, but the news agent insisted that he was selling his wares in a Missouri Pacific train and could not be molested by the local authorities.

WAITING THE REPLY.

The Telegraph Operators Present Their Demands.

The Western Union Managers Preparing for War—The Strike Imminent—Local Preparations—Manager Brown Interviewed—The Wire-Workers Well Organized.

There is every reason to believe now that at noon on Wednesday the 13,500 members of the Brotherhood of Telegraph Operators of the United States and Canada, abetted and encouraged by a national organization of mysterious strength, known to the world at large as the Knights of Labor, will "strike" work. The statement is made in this manner because there is not the slightest reason to believe that the Western Union management will accede to the demands of the operators as formally presented by the executive committee of the Brotherhood to the President and Board of Directors of the Telegraph company at noon to-day in New York City. The Brotherhood has given the company forty-eight hours in which to consider the demand. Colonel Baker, the Division Superintendent at this point, said this afternoon: "I have received information that the bill of grievances has been presented and that the executive committee of our board of directors is now considering it. Whether they will avail themselves of the forty-eight hours in which to give an answer I cannot tell. This much I am able to assure the public. The operations of the merchants' exchanges of the country and the receipts of the news of the day by the newspapers will not be impaired. Regular commercial business may be temporarily embarrassed, but only temporarily. I do not know that there will be a strike. I hope not for the sake of all parties concerned, but the management, warned by previous difficulties, has taken to heart Æsop's old fable of the boar, who, when detected whetting his tusks in the solitude of a grove on a calm summer day replied, 'In time of peace prepare for war,' or something like that—you see I have not read it since 1870."

THE OPERATORS' DEMAND.

This uprising has been fermenting since early last June, and seems to have found birth in Chicago, from whence discussion of the impending movement was transferred to Pittsburg, where, on Sunday, July 1, the executive committee of the Brotherhood met and began to formulate the bill of grievances which has since developed. In the movement commercial operators, railroad operators and "line men," better known as "repairers," and telephone operators are included. The "bill of grievances," as presented to-day to Gen. Eckert and his associates of the directory, is as follows:

1. Believing that man's religious and moral welfare require that at least one day in seven be accorded him for rest and recreation, we demand the total abolition of Sunday work as a compulsory duty, unless compensated as extra service.

2. That eight hours shall constitute a regular day's work and seven hours a regular night's work; but when circumstances make the application of this law impracticable working hours shall be regulated by local assemblies. Both sexes shall receive equal pay for equal work.

3. That a universal increase of 15 per cent on salaries now paid be demanded.

4. That the executive board of District Assembly 45 shall use their discretion in presenting the above demands upon all commercial corporations in the United States providing they be made between the 15th day of June and the 15th day of August next, and that the executive board shall give at least two weeks' notice to every local assembly in district 45 as to the exact time when these demands will be made.

5. That corporations upon whom these demands shall be made, as above provided for, shall be required to make answer to the same within forty-eight hours.

6. That in case the telegraph companies upon whom these demands are made do not accede thereto within the time specified the District Executive Board shall order a general suspension of business, if they deem it advisable, and that they shall have full power to conduct any arbitration appertaining thereto.

7. Should any company, corporation or firm accede to the term of the bill of grievances, or should a conference, arbitration or compromise result satisfactorily, in the judgment of the District Executive Board, members of the district employed by such company, corporation or firm may be allowed to work, regardless of the refusal of other companies, corporations or firms to accede to said bill of grievances; provided it shall appear to the satisfaction of the District Board that such action will not prejudice the interests of members employed by other companies, corporations or firms which have failed to accede to said bill of grievances as aforesaid.

8. That the above complete the bill of grievances and demands as far as it applies to commercial interests.

9. Linemen's interests. That eight hours shall constitute a day's work, and that compensation at the rate of two days' pay shall be allowed for all Sunday work. That the lowest salary paid a regular lineman shall be $65 per month, and for help $50 per month, and that duties of linemen shall be confined solely to their legitimate work.

10. Railroad operators' interests. That no operator shall be paid less than $50 per month.

11. That an increase of $10 per month shall be added to the salaries now paid.

12. That all operators required to work on Sunday shall be allowed an extra day's pay for the same.

AT THE MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE

to-day there was great interest shown in the situation. Many of the older merchants recalled the disastrous days of 1870, when business was at a stand-still for several days and crippled for weeks. There was considerable sympathy expressed for the operators in their demands for better wages and better treatment, but there was more anxious speculation as to the effect of the "lockout" upon trade generally. Indeed, assurance was conveyed to some of the heaviest flour and grain operators that the market reports would not be interrupted, and this partially allayed the feeling of alarm.

LOCAL OPERATORS.

were as reticent as railroad employes on the occasion of an accident. They unanimously referred inquiring reporters to Mortimer Shaw, local secretary of the brotherhood, who for purposes of interview was inaccessible, being at present in New York city and one of the committee of seven which presented the demand this morning. A B. & O. operator had received information that when the committee called upon the directors of that body, they were very courteously received, and there is every reason to believe that the company will accede to all demands. At the Western Union telegraph office a rumor prevailed that the B. & O. company had acceded to all demands.

MANAGER BROWN,

at the Western Union office, said: "I only know indirectly, or rather, I have read in the newspapers that demands have been made and that the company is considering them. I attend to my business in this office, and can assure the Merchants' Exchange that they will get their market reports regularly and that the press will not suffer. The POST-DISPATCH special New York wire will be in operation from 3 to 6 a. m. every day as usual, and specials will be transmitted without delay, also the Associated Press. Out of 122 operators on my staff, sixty-one I know are loyal. On this floor alone I have four good operators who will help out. Up in the book-keeping department, I have a half-dozen more. In Colonel Baker's office, at least eight more, are competent operators and will jump into the breach. In addition to that, we know where we can get plenty of good outside men, and it is no idle assurance that I give, when I say that this office is ready to meet a strike. Col. Lowrey telegraphs from Chicago that he is prepared to hold the fort, and I suppose all other principal officers have prepared themselves not to be taken by surprise.

RAILROAD OPERATORS.

Information has been received that the Western Union company at this point, in preparing for the probable strike, have been assisted by the railroad companies, and that operators from off the lines are being quietly massed here, in readiness for Wednesday's troubles.

In St. Louis there are 200 operators belonging to the brotherhood, and about 150 who do not.

Great interest is felt in the attitude of the Mutual Union operators, who, as a rule, belong to the brotherhood, although the Mutual Union belongs to the Western Union Telegraph company; a separate set of officers are maintained, and the Mutual Union men are paid direct from headquarters, and not from local earnings, as is the case with the Western Union."

A New York dispatch says that to comply with the demands of the operators will entail an additional expenditure for salaries and extra help of $2,550,000 per annum.

Western Union Stock Drops.

NEW YORK, July 16.—In Wall street at 1 p. m., Western Union declined from 80⅜ to 78⅝, on reports that the telegraph operators will send in a demand for increased pay and shorter hours work. The general stock market continues weak. Lower Manitoba has fallen from 113¼ to 107¾. The Mercantile Trust Company is paying the Western Union dividend of one and three-fourths per cent, to shareholders to-day, under the Gould agreement.

A Demand Made.

NEW YORK, July 16.—A committee from the telegraphers' organization, composed of seven members from different cities, called on Gen. Eckert about ten o'clock to-day and presented a letter requesting a general increase of fifteen per cent. in the salaries of operators and a slight reduction in their hours of work, and requested that a reply be returned as early as convenient. No time is stipulated and no threats are made.

The Telephone Men.

CHICAGO, July 16.—The telephone climbers, repairers and instrument men demanded an increase of 25 per cent in their pay to-day, and stated that they would await the decision of the company forty-eight hours.

KRUM VINDICATED.

His Course as Mr. Ford's Administrator Declared to be Prudent.

This morning Judge Woerner, of the Probate Court, received the final report of Judge Chester M. Krum, as administrator of the estate of Charles W. Ford. It will be remembered that during Judge Krum's recent absence from the city Mr. John G. Chandler, as counsel for the heirs of Mr. Ford, publicly charged that Judge Krum had made false settlements; that he failed to account for funds in his possession belonging to the estate. Mr. Chandler sought to have another administrator appointed and the Probate Court accordingly revoked Judge Krum's letters of administration and turned over the estate to the Public Administrator. When Judge Krum returned to St. Louis he prepared to meet the charges that had been preferred against him, and this morning appeared before the court with a statement of his conduct of the estate. It appears from the statement that there is at present in his hands a cash balance of $1,782 31. Judge Krum explained that the reason why he had not distributed this money among the heirs of Ford was on account of a suit now pending in an Illinois court against Ford as a stockholder of the defunct Republic Life Insurance company of Chicago. Ford, during his lifetime had subscribed for 100 shares of the capital stock of the company and had paid twenty per cent of the subscription. Afterwards the company became involved and it was decided to reduce the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $200,000. Ford received the benefit of the reduction in the shape of a certificate of fully paid up stock. When the company finally became bankrupt the receiver entered suit against all the stockholders for eighty per cent of the capital stock, claiming that the reduction had been fraudulent and was, therefore, void. Suit was brought in Chicago, and Judge Krum, as administrator, entered appearance as one of the defendants, and also for twenty other St. Louis stockholders. In his statement this morning Judge Krum declared that his course in the matter had been perfectly legal, and he believed was the wisest thing that could be done under the circumstances. Mr. Chandler admitted that Judge Krum's statement was true in every particular, but insisted that by entering an appearance for the estate as one of the defendants in the case he had created a contingent liability which would necessarily hamper the Public Administrator in distributing the balance of the estate. Judge Woerner declined to adopt this view of the matter, and ruled that Judge Krum's conduct had been entirely straightforward and wise. He accordingly discharged Judge Krum as the administrator of the Ford estate and turned over the estate to Public Administrator Martroom D. Lewis, who immediately afterwards received from Judge Krum a check for $1,782 31, the balance in his hand belonging to the estate. Judge Madill appeared with Judge Krum and Mr. Ford Smith seconded Mr. John G. Chandler.

No Signs of Violence.

DESMOINES, July 16.—Reports from Harlan are to the effect that the excitement there has materially debated and that there are at present no apprehensions of violence to prisoner Hardy who is confined in jail there. No effort will be made by the Shelby county authorities to hold him as accessory to the murder of J. W. Maddy, of Marne, who was killed in the attempt to capture the murderer of Clingan. Hallock, who was wounded at Des Moines, was resting easy last night, and there were hopes of his recovery. The funeral of Maddy will occur at Marne, on Tuesday, at ten o'clock.

TOM THUMB.

Death of the Most Wonderful Dwarf of Modern Times.

The peer of American wonder speculation has passed away. Charles Heywood Stratton, viz., Tom Thumb, was born in Bridgeport, January 4, 1838. His life has been indissolubly blended with the amusement and prodigy-loving multitudes. Whilst Mr. P. T. Barnum, the wonder-explorer of our civilization, was staying one night, in the winter of 1842, with his brother, then keeping the Franklin Hotel, at Bridgeport, Connecticut, he heard, for the first time, of Charles Heywood Stratton, afterwards Gen. Tom Thumb, and requested his brother to bring him to the hotel. Not then two feet high, weighing less than sixteen pounds, a bright-eyed little midget, with light hair and ruddy cheeks, the wonder-speculator at once resolved to secure his services, and succeeded in procuring him from his mother for four weeks at three dollars a week, including traveling and boarding expenses. Stratton then being only five years of age, the inquiry might be very easily provoked, "How do you know he is a dwarf?" but the shrewd tact of the wonder-speculator rapidly overcame his hood-winked dubiousness, and the museum bills immediately announced in blood-curdling capitals that "Gen. Tom Thumb" had made his advent into a world of common-place severities. Though but a child five years old, Stratton possessed more than usual aptitude for fun, possessing an exceedingly keen and droll sense of the ludicrous. To now educate and train the diminutive prodigy in the occult engineering performances of the museum was the aim of the showman, and Stratton proved himself an apt pupil, displaying a great deal of native talent. At the end of the four-weeks' engagement Mr. Barnum reëngaged him for one year at $7 a week with a gratuity of fifty dollars at the end of the engagement. "Tom Thumb" speedily became the people's favorite and had become, before the end of the year a national i sue. Another annual engagement was then made, including the privilege of exhibiting him in Europe, and the sleeping conservatisms of the old country were to be startled by the midget phenomena. On Thursday, January 18, 1844, away they sailed, wonder speculator and the nationally discussed prodigy, on board the Yorkshire for Liverpool, escorted to the docks by a brass band. A crowd of Liverpool curiosity-seekers greeted them with satisfactory "huzzas" on their arrival, and Tom Thumb was soon to be dazzled with the regal pomps and splendid æsthetic trappings of the European courts, kings, dukes, marquises, baronets, lords and squires to gaze upon the toy midget of the new world. It was but the work of a few days. A placard at the door of Egyptian hall soon announced, "Closed this evening, General Tom Thumb being at Buckingham palace by command of her Majesty."

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen," exclaimed the General as he came within hailing distance of her Majesty and the ladies in waiting, arrayed in dresses sparkling with diamonds. Court decorum was momentarily forgotton. Bursts of laughter rang through the long corridors of marble as the General familiarly informed the Queen that her picture gallery was "first rate." The "General" paid two more visits to Buckingham palace after this, being introduced to Leopold, King of the Belgians, the Emperor Nicholas of Russia, Ibrahim Pacha and the King of Saxony. The General then visited France, Belgium, and in October, 1844, having returned to England, remained there in the hands of Mr. Barnum's agents. Probably of all the enterprises engaged in by Mr. Barnum, the Tom Thumb hit was the most successful one financially. Tom Thum, leaves a widow who has been on the stage with him since their marriage in 1863.

The Flood Sufferers.

The manner in which the relief fund, recently raised in St. Louis and other places for the benefit of the sufferers from the flood in the American Bottom, is being distributed is not meeting with the approval of the poor people of that district. The committee met recently and passed a resolution to the effect that the wants of all parties presenting a written order signed by any member of the committee should be supplied, but this has not been done, the agent requiring at least two signatures. Complaints are also made about the quality of food furnished. Although the water has subsided, most of the American Bottom is still in a terrible condition, seep water covered with a thick green coating occupying all the lowlands with no possible outlet unless soaking into the earth or evaporating. Malaria is gaining a strong foothold in the recently inundated districts and an unusually sickly season is expected to follow. The district between Newport and Venice is yet under water with the exception of a few high ridges. The Catholic church and school stand in several feet of water and can only be reached by means of boats.

Death of J. H. Blanke.

J. H. Blanke, who died yesterday morning at 1312 Benton street, was one of St. Louis' oldest and most respected merchants and citizens. He was eighty years of age and had been a resident of St. Louis since 1847. Born in Hanover, Germany, and brought up to the confectionery business, he came direct to St. Louis when forty-four years of age, and established a business which has grown to enormous proportions. J. H. Blanke became J. H. Blanke & Son. Twenty-four years ago the old gentleman retired, and the firm of Blanke & Bro. flourished, and is now known as the Blanke Brothers Candy company. The senior Blanke had amassed a competency, and while taking a strong interest in the affairs of his sons, refrained from active business. His health has always been excellent and two days ago he was a strong-brained, vigorous old man. Cholera morbus was the direct cause of his death. He leaves six grown children, August H. Blanke, Henry W. Blanke, D. J. Blanke, Fred. W. Blanke, Mrs. H. B. Peters and Mrs. H. Wennecker. The funeral will take place from the family residence to Bellefontaine cemetery at 3 p. m. to-morrow.

CRIMINAL NOTES.

Count von Danenberg Released From Jail—A Proposed Prosecution.

On Saturday Acting Judge Napton, of the Court of Criminal Correction, privately reconsidered the sentence imposed by Judge Noonan on Graf Adolf von Danenberg, and commuted it to three weeks, the time spent in jail. Danenberg pleaded guilty to stealing a surveyor's instrument from the St. Louis University, and was sent to jail for three months. A few days ago the German consul received $850 for Dannenberg from his sister in the old country, and on Saturday paid the costs.

The body of an unknown white boy about ten years old was caught floating in the river at the foot of Brown street to-day.

John Quinn had an examination to-day on a charge of robbery, preferred by Wm. Doerr, and was held to answer in the sum of $1,000.

In default of $800 bond, George Washington was committed to jail to-day for a deadly assault on Maggie Jones.

Blass Van Hook was sent to the Workhouse to-day for six months for stealing a watch from Theresa Vail.

A. M. Daily of the Metropolitan Hotel applied for a warrant charging Thomas Allen, the proprietor of the Champion's Rest, with violating the Sunday law to-day, but was refused the process, as it was a private prosecution which would not result in a fair trial, as no one man could be picked upon for an example. He was referred to the police.

POLICE RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

Election of an Executive Committee for the Ensuing Year.

The annual election of an executive committee of the Police Relief Fund Association was held to-day. The committee is composed of eleven patrolmen, two sergeants, one representative from the chief's office and one captain, making fifteen in all. The captains and sergeants met at headquarters and the various platoons at the station-houses. The election resulted as follows for the coming year: Captain C. W. Price, of the First district, will represent the captains; Sergeants Brown and Reedy, their rank; Detective Hugh O'Neill, the chief's staff; Officer Farley, First district. Officers Chris. Palmer and Andrea, Second; Officers Lyons and Donegan, Central; Officers McFarland and Dowling, Third; Officers John Horstman and Cumins, Fourth, and Officers Pierce and Downing, Fifth.

Sparling, the Jockey, Dying.

Dan Sparling, the jockey, who was thrown from Charles L. Hunt's horse, John Davis, at the Chicago meeting, lies at the point of death at his home at Eatontown, N. J. It will be remembered that John Davis, who was the favorite was running strong for the Garden City cup, when Sparling, his rider, tried to pass Lida Stanhope, who was crowding Davis, and, as a consequence, horse and rider were thrown violently into a ditch. Sparling was picked up with a terrible gash in his head, and when asked by the judges whether Spellman had jostled him, he was unable to answer. Sparling is well known in St. Louis and all over the country. He was Pawle's rider in the veteran's two-year-old days. Dan was the only jockey who could hold John Davis on the track, and it was thought by his riding that the "Missouri Plug" won many of his races.

The amount of the note was money loaned by Gen. Hancock to Mrs. Russell. Col. T. T. Gantt is Gen. Hancock's attorney in the matter, and Mr. Charles H. Turner is the executor of Mrs. Russell's estate. The claim was taken under advisement.

THE SUNDAY LAW.

The Police Board Says Its Enforcement Rests With the Courts.

Vice-President Kerwin and Police Commissioner Kinkead were around the Four Courts bright and early this morning in search of a letter which the Sunday morning papers said that Governor Crittenden had written to the board, peremptorily ordering them to enforce the Sunday feature of the Downing law. A POST-DISPATCH reporter has the word of both gentlemen that no such communication was received. Said the reporter to Mr. Kerwin, "Will the Police Board at its meeting to-morrow take up the Sunday closing question?"

"It may receive some attention."

"Have you consulted the City Counselor as yet?"

"I have. We had a long talk on Friday."

"And what did he advise?"

"He suggested that it would, perhaps, be best for the board to wait until the Municipal Assembly had perfected the dram-shop ordinance now pending before it. Prosecution for the violation of the law may be brought before the Court of Criminal Correction, where they will be tried before a jury. Any fines assessed in such a trial will be paid into the school fund. Now, I think that if such prosecutions are to occur, that they should be under the laws of the city, and the city should derive the revenue."

"Now, Mr. Kerwin, that you have had plenty of time to think over this Sunday closing question, what do you think of it?"

"I will tell you, and speak freely for the first time for publication. I look upon this keeping open of beer gardens on Sunday different than I do on other misdemeanors declared by law. In the Sunday case the habits of a very large proportion of our people are involved. The present state of affairs is the outgrowth of years, and to endeavor to stop it would be a doubtful experiment. I look upon it as the duty of the courts to enforce such laws as this, if they, in their wisdom, think it should be done. It is the duty of the police to give information of violations of the law to the proper officers. It is for those officers to prosecute. I do not hesitate to say that I am opposed to anything like the raiding of these places and the arrest of their proprietors. They are all men of responsibility and business standing, and can be reached through "information," just as merchants are for violating street obstructing, water waste, projecting signs, and ordinances of that nature. Another feature strikes me forcibly, and that is, if the dramshop men were to adopt the retaliatory measures hinted at, three times the present police force would make no headway in the enforcement of a full Sunday law. That may be done in a little town, but the habits of the people of a city like St. Louis must be taken into consideration."

COMMISSIONER KINKEAD,

who stood by during the conversation with Mr. Kerwin, heartily seconded the views of his superior regarding the duties of the Police Board and the courts in the premises. To rush the police out on to the streets and fill the calaboose with saloon-keepers would be the height of absurdity. The police would furnish the information to the courts that a certain law was being violated. It remained then with the court to prosecute."

In conclusion Mr. Kerwin added that the City Counsellor would probably recommend the delay spoken of in an official communication to the Police Board to-morrow.

CITY COUNSELOR BELL,

when seen, stated that he had advised Mr. Kerwin to have the Police Board withhold action until the dram-shop ordinance was passed. He had promised to draw up a few points for the guidance of the board, but said this afternoon that he would not be prepared to officially communicate with them to-morrow. This surely delays Sunday-closing one more week at least.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

The several suits pending in the justices' courts against Vogel, Kerwin, Allen and Cunningham for robbing freight cars, were all dismissed by the prosecution this morning and warrants taken out in Belleville against all the parties.

John Kemmish and Joseph Rempe, two St. Louis boys, were jailed yesterday for playing around the Louisville and Nashville freight cars and fined costs by 'Squire Draggon.

A special meeting of the city council is called for this afternoon.

T. P. Wilson, Mary Brown and Emily Hawkins were jailed yesterday for being drunk on the streets, and were each fined $3 and costs by 'Squire Lynn.

A Sunday Case.

Patrick Baldinici, who was arrested in the Third District yesterday for selling ice cream on the public streets on Sunday, had his case continued to the 18th. The revised city ordinances, among other articles, provides that "no hawker or peddler shall be permitted to offer for sale by outcry or by going from place to place on the public streets or alleys in the city, any fruit, vegetable, or other articles of food on a Sunday." The fines in such cases the law fixes at not less than $50 and no more than $500.

A Base Ball Enthusiast.

Governments irregular. States dull. Railways lower. Share speculation again weak this morning, and prices fell off ¼ to 1¾. Denver, Western Union, Lackawanna and Oregon Trans-Continental declined most. At 11:30 there was a rally of ⅛ to ¾, the latter in Denver, but towards mid-day a weaker feeling prevailed, and Manitoba ran off from 113¼ to 111.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION, CLOSING AT 1 P. M.

The crops of the extreme Northwest are in a bad way, according to last Friday's Portland, Oregon, News. It says: "The warm and sultry weather continues, with no indications of rain, which could now be of benefit to the general health alone. Forest fires are raging in wooded districts, and the air is heavily burdened with noisome smoke. Headaches and disordered systems are the rule, and the universal prayer is for rain. As regards wheat, oats and growing crops in general, rain can be of little benefit. If the Willamette Valley harvests a half crop of wheat and oats it will be doing well. Visitors in our city from various sections of the valley tell the same story of poor crops and hard times. The yield in Eastern Oregon, it is asserted by some dealers, will not be so large as reported. There is no use in attempting to disguise the fact that the harvest of 1883 and 1884 in the Northwest will be very short, and its momentary prosperity correspondingly reduced."——The St. Paul Pioneer Press of July 14, says: "Yesterday's crop reports were again favorable. Rain fell throughout the Red River Valley, not abundantly, but in such quantities as to postpone, at least, the fear of a ruinous drought. In other parts of Minnesota and Dakota the weather and the crop outlook is all that could be desired."——The Merchants' Exchange to-day commences its summer closing of the afternoon board. From to-day to September 10, inclusive, there will be no business in options of grain transacted after 1 p. m., except in the offices of commission firms and brokers. On Mondays the exchange will not open until 10 a. m., and on that day there will be no 10 o'clock call.——C. H. Albers writes from Creef, Scotland, that the crops of both Scotland and Ireland are looking splendid.——Toledo's store of wheat has decreased 90,000 bu to 796,650, corn has fallen off 121,000 bu to 248,050 and oats are 5,000 bu smaller at 49,140 bu.——Over half of July has passed and receipts of wheat for that time have been 254,963. bu., against 1,333,112 bu. for same time 1882, 616,534 bu. in 1881, and 1,704,698 bu. in 1880.——New York stocks this morning were 3,893,526 bu. wheat, 1,039,974 bu. corn, 999,468 bu. oats and 326,999 bu. rye. This is a decrease for the week of 63,868 bu. in wheat, and 9,500 bu. in oats, and an increase of 61,446 bu. in corn and 74,097 bu. in rye.——The first car of new oats for the season was received to-day and inspected No. 2.——The London Miller gives the wheat supplies in passage and off coast on July 1 as 564,000 bu from Atlantic ports, 5,032,000 bu from California, 904,000 bu from the Black Sea and the Danube, 2,192,000 bu from Egypt and India, 3,016,000 bu from South America, and 2,132,000 bu from Australasia. There were seven cargoes off coast unsold on July 1.——Wheat futures were unsettled to-day, but strength was prominent, as other markets were up, and though there was considerable irregularity to values and fluctuations frequent; later there was such an urgent demand on sharp advances in other markets that prices mounted rapidly upward and at the close were 1¼@1¾c above Saturday's close. Corn was very dull and irregular, but with no material change in value, either one way or another. After the noon call nothing was done, and at the close was dull and nominal at about ⅛c above Saturday's close. Oats were stronger, but slow. Cash wheat was higher and strong, with an active and altogether unsupplied demand, that came mainly on milling account. Cash No. 2 mixed, rejected and no-grade were some better and in good demand, but No. 2 rejected white-mixed declined and were slow sale. Oats were dull for cash, as there was little demand from any source.

CATTLE—A small supply and general good if not a very active demand from all classes of buyers caused a strengthening in values and a firmer feeling. Texan cattle made up the bulk of the arrivals and the quality was below the average of last week, but notwithstanding this fact sales were made at better prices than prevailed at the close of last week, some buyers claiming that prices as paid by them were fully a shilling higher. Besides the large movement in butchers' stuff, shippers commenced taking hold at an unusually early hour, and a number of native shipping steers were weighed up during the opening hours. The bulk of the business, however, was done in Texas and Indian cattle to retail dealers and city butchers who, having large orders, purchased freely at very satisfactory prices. At 11 a. m. the supply was pretty well exhausted. Prices were strong in all descriptions of butchers' cattle and very steady in all other grades.

HOGS—Trading was very quiet during the opening and almost exclusively confined to city butchers who were paying from $5 10@5 40, an advance of 5 to 10c. Other grades were not effected apparently, and remained weak and unsettled. Prices for lights were not fully established but it was thought that $5 50@5 60 would be about the figures when buyers who had orders and appeared to be in a very pleasant frame of mind, commenced operating. Mixed packing grades were quoted at $4 60@5 00 for the very best. "Curly Schnaider" claiming that he could get the best in the market for these figures. Altogether the market as compared with the closing days of last week was improved and especially on heavies, which heretofore have felt the full force of the weakness and the very low prices prevailing. Later in the day when buyers have fully recovered from the shock caused by the advance a good movement is expected, as orders are plentiful and buyers desirous of taking hold.

Shore Short Stops.

The river continues rising slowly.

Business is not any too good.

The Hayes brought up three empty barges from New Orleans.

The Iron Duke towed in nine empty barges, which she left at Ore Pile to be loaded with iron ore. The Raven brought three more for the same purpose. They are all Gray's barges.

The barge Red Wing, which was broken from its moorings and sunk by the storm on Friday last, was raised by the Invincible Salvor No. 2 and towed to the ways for repairs this morning.

The grand excursion steamer St. Paul leaves this afternoon in the St. Louis and St. Paul Packet line. She has great accommodations and will make good time. Capt. Bill Burke goes up on her this trip.

The pretty and lively excursion steamer Pittsburg, of the Diamond Jo line, will be off to-morrow afternoon for St. Paul. Already she has a good trip engaged and Capt. John Killeen says he will have all he wants.

The City of Providence arrived from Vicksburg this morning only half loaded. She returns to-morrow.

South-bound business is not nearly so good as it might be, and the boats and barges leaving last week were not very heavily patronized.

The local packets to-day are the Elliott, Ste. Genevieve and Spread Eagle. They were all on time.

The Alice Brown brought in two barges of Pittsburg coal for the gas companies. She took two empties to the ore pile for iron ore.

The Pittsburg brought in a good trip from St. Paul. As a matter of fact the Pittsburg is becoming very popular.

The Port Eads took out five barges for New Orleans.

The Montana of the Electric Line, and the Fannie Lewis, of the Kansas City Packet Company, will keep each other company in the Missouri as far as Kansas City. Both leave Thursday and are good boats. Negotiations for amalgamating the two lines are still in progress and if successful one of the boats will be held over a few days.

The Anchor Liner City of New Orleans, Captain A. Jax Carter, leaves for New Orleans on Wednesday.

The barge line will send the Henry Lourey with a tow to New Orleans on Thursday.

The Charlie Bowen is lying in a presumably safe position across the river. Efforts will be made this afternoon to get her afloat.

ALTON, ILL., July 15.—The Colorado ahead of all time to Alton. Missouri locals and National engineers to the front as picnickers. Finest entertainment of the season, and the management perfect. By order of the excursionists.

MONDAY, JULY 16, 1883.

THIS is the "Silly Season," and the "Silly Seven" are getting in their work.

THE St. Louis "Browns" to the whip pennant: "Thou art so near and yet so noncomeatable."

OUR local columns tell in a rather graphic way to-day how the city of St. Louis adjusts itself to a dry Sunday. We seem to come out strong for recreation.

ONE of our morning contemporaries publishes the announcement that cholera is affecting the English money market. In this instance it has produced a stringency.

MR. BISMARCK and his neighbors can now let go the American hog and devote themselves to embargoing the Asiatic scourge which threatens to invade the Continent.

CHOLERA has finally arrived in London, if we may believe the somewhat sensational dispatches. It may not be long before the pestilence which stalketh takes passage on a New York steamer, if this is the case.

THERE are mutterings in the discontented army of telegraph operators and a strike is tolerably certain to take place this week. Unfortunately we can't lay in a supply of telegraphic news sufficient to last us through the season of trouble.

ABOUT the best testimonial to Mr. TILDEN's health that we have seen is that furnished by the editor of the New York World, who recently rode with the old gentleman on the Hudson River Railway from Tarrytown to New York. To sum up, Mr. TILDEN is a very spry man for his age.

TO THE surprise of everybody a jury has been secured to try POLK, the defaulting Treasurer of Tennessee. With twelve men in the box who do not read and who do not entertain opinions, it would seem that the defense might be encouraged to advance the insanity theory for the prisoner.

WHEN the vast and vaporous VASTINE was last seen he was sitting in the seclusion of his law office, his head swathed in a wet towel, his powerful mind absorbed in EDMUND BURKE's great speech impeaching WARREN HASTINGS for high crimes and misdemeanors. He will lower the record on Mr. BURKE when it comes to impeaching Mayor BILL.

MAYOR BILL is to be married to-morrow. It might be well for the clergyman having charge of the ceremony to remind the fair daughter of Indiana who is about to become Lady Mayoress of the city of St. Louis, that she will not only be expected to love, honor and obey her husband, but stick to him in all his impeachment trials and tribulations as well. The viperous VASTINE is on the trail.

THE French citizens of St. Louis who celebrated the destruction of the Bastile on Saturday night were ably assisted by patriotic Americans, and many pretty sentiments were expressed. But we are confronted with the painful fact that the BARTHOLDI statue of Liberty, the gift of France, is still waiting for a pedestal before taking up her position in New York harbor. Talk is said to be inexpensive.

IT is reasonably certain that Mayor EWING, whose official evolutions have been seriously obstructed by the Silly Seven, has neither been guilty of malfeasance, misfeasance or plain feasance without sauce. Still he will be "impeached" because the voluptuous VASTINE is bursting with great things, and it is necessary to terrify BILL while the weather is warm and while the matrimonial yoke is galling him.

UP in Jefferson City yesterday the saloon-keepers politely closed their establishments and then devoted themselves energetically to the enforcement of the Sunday law against all classes of citizens given to the performance of manual labor. It was a severe test for the capital city, but the experiment demonstrates that the retaliatory policy might be made to work as well in a large city as in a small town.

THE viridescent, virile, but highly virtuous VASTINE can repeat BURKE's great impeachment speech from end to end, with his right hand tied behind him. He says to the other Six: "Wait, boys, until I reach the peroration, and I'll lift BILL EWING two feet from his chair with every sweep of my oratorical flail. I think I will impeach him in the name of every man who has failed to get an office from TUBAL CAIN to J. H. POHLMAN."

IT seems that a Saloon-keepers' Association was organized in Kansas City to give the people a taste of the Sunday law enforced against all lines of business. By discontinuing their own business on that day the saloon-keepers could watch their neighbors in other avocations and be prepared to [illegible] the prosecuting attorney with proofs [illegible] of the Sunday law, to be made the basis of grand jury indictments. Most of the saloons closed yesterday in good faith, but a few kept their back doors open and one kept all its doors open and did a roaring business all day. If all the saloons in Kansas City were closed on Sunday and her citizens were reduced to the necessity of buying their Sunday refreshments in bottles on Saturday evenings, there would still be enough Sunday law violations to plunge the community into bankruptcy, should the law be rigidly enforced.

OUR UNCLE SAMMY.

Mr. WATTERSON is at it again. He has given to the Courier-Journal a column of well-written symphony designed to show how utterly impossible it will be for the Democratic party to get along without TILDEN as a standard-bearer in 1884, and yet how thoroughly determined the old gentleman is not to be hauled away from his beloved seclusion and into the dusty, dirty, peace-destroying arena of politics. He speaks of him as the excellent man; the secluded man of Greystone, or Gravestone; "the silent, uncomplaining man," whose name, like WALLENSTEIN's, is going forth "to assemble forces in the desolate camps." "His name," says Mr. WATTERSON, "is an inspiration and a watchword." Of course the Republican newspapers will now respond: "And likewise the bar'l." Mr. WATTERSON says of Uncle SAMUEL:

The man is, within himself, the most original and useful of his time. Had he desired the Presidency, as Hayes hankered after it, he would have had it. He simply refused to take it on conditions. They were offered him by both parties. He obstinately refused. To-day he would not have it at all. He is in every regard a disinterested, healthy, philosophic patriot and statesman; taking a deep interest in affairs; as eager for his friends as a boy; who would not exchange Greystone for fifty Executive Mansions. * * * It is too late to use his personality for any candidatorial purpose. But it is not too late to use his sagacity and his disinterestedness. Hence his vitality. Hence his power.

We think we detect in this an ingenious device for pressing Mr. TILDEN into the service again. This constant talk about his self-denying character, his bashful seclusion, his great intellect, and the magic of his name—and, above all, his firm determination never to be a candidate for President again, together with slight references to his health—has a tendency to create a sympathetic longing for him. People naturally desire what they think they can't get.

Mr. WATTERSON is about as cunning as the celebrated village orator, MARCUS ANTONIUS, who managed to throw Rome into a fever by ingeniously touching on the virtues of CÆSAR while haranguing a mob of his enemies. He says that TILDEN is a power in the land because a healthy contrition has settled on the Democratic leaders. The masses have always been for him, we are told, because they saw in their strong popular instinct that SAMMY was "not merely a friend, but a wise and able friend, and now," says Mr. W., the faithful BOSWELL of the Sage of Greystone, "this overwhelming current of sentiment has reached and touched the politicians, and now they are as much for TILDEN as the people." But it won't amount to anything, for Mr. WATTERSON sadly adds:

Can anybody wonder that, surrounded by all that can make life happy, no power on earth could drag Mr. Tilden to Washington to take the oath of office, far less to accept a Presidential nomination?

This really touches us. Still we think that Mr. TILDEN could be dragged away from Greystone with four yoke of oxen and forced to take the Presidential nomination next year. It would really seem that the Democratic party can't do without him. The children are not exactly crying for him, but the strong men who do the voting are filled with lamentation, and they refuse to be comforted.

We deputize Mr. JOHN G. PRIEST, who is sometimes spoken of as "our local statesman," to make arrangements for the political oxen that will be needed to drag Mr. TILDEN away from Greystone. Mr. WATTERSON, with his steel-pointed goad, will fill the responsible position of driver.

THE FRENCH REPUBLIC.

Paris has just unveiled with great eclat a statue of the Republic. It is the figure of a majestic woman wearing a laurel crown and Phrygian cap, holding upward in her right hand the olive branch of peace, while her left rests upon a shield incribed, "The Rights of Man." Around this figure are grouped "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity," a bronze lion guarding the urn of universal suffrage, and bas reliefs commemorating the great Republican events of French history. The people of Paris greeted it with fetes and huzzas, and there is no reason to doubt that the Republic is still strong in the hearts of the French people, but an impression is abroad among the statesmen of other nations that it is nearing dangerous breakers. It has had to carry the enormous load of debt imposed upon France by the Franco-Prussian war and the Second Empire. It has been compelled to maintain a giant standing army, always a menace to a Republic. To meet these exhausting drains upon the resources of the country, and to lay a new foundation for national expansion and future relief, it has been compelled to enter upon a colonial acquisition that has aroused the jealousy of neighboring nations.

This course should be a guarantee that the national necessity and yearning for enlargement will not be at their expense or by encroachment upon them, but they refuse to take that view of it. The acquisition of Tunis angered Italy and enabled BISMARCK to form the anti-Gallican alliance of Germany, Austria and Italy. England was compensated with Egypt, but is now evidently ready to assume a hostile attitude towards the operations of France in Tonquin and Madagascar. English papers are pointing with alarm to the strength of the French navy and the British ministers show a disposition to take the most serious and exaggerated view of every rumor about the conduct of the French officers towards British ships and subjects on the coast of Madagascar.

It is evidently the policy of the Republic to keep peace with near neighbors by finding an outlet in Asia and Africa for French commerce and colonial enterprise, and if they are wise her neighbors will encourage rather than thwart that policy. The loss of vast colonial possessions contributed greatly to the overthrow of the Bourbons and the establishment of the first Republic. If Europe now combines to forbid French acquisition in other quarters of the world, the pent up energy of France may again explode in war for the acquisition of adjacent territory, and she may develop another NAPOLEON about the time that old BISMARCK and VON MOLTKE pass from the stage of action. Peace has been the practice of the Republic so far, and is still its motto. When the Republic falls by the machinations of European cabinets, it will be succeeded by another military monarch and another era of European wars.

A GREAT deal has been said in the newspapers about the illness of Mr. JOHN McCULLOUGH, the popular actor—the only man left to the American stage of heroic mold capable of presenting the tragic dramas which made the fame of MACREADY and FORREST. Mr. McCULLOUGH broke down last spring under the strain of hard work. That most delicate of much-abused organs, the liver, was largely to blame for the collapse. He retired in April to the quiet home of a friend at Quincy, Ill., where it was hoped he would soon regain strength and vigor. He failed to build up, as was expected, and recently he was caught in a shower while out exercising, and the hope of an early return to health has been abandoned by his friends. Having been a hale, hearty man all his life, and having broken down at the very height of his fame, with the harvest before him, Mr. McCULLOUGH has suffered considerable depression in this his first serious illness, but the stories of his mental condition which have been published from time to time in the newspapers are simply absurd. He was in St. Louis with his manager, Mr. CONNER, on Saturday last. As it did not seem probable that Mr. McCULLOUGH would regain his strength sufficiently to open his season at Denver on the 10th prox. it was decided to cancel all dates for next season and find other occupation for the company engaged to support him. Mr. McCULLOUGH will, therefore, not play next season. He has gone to the seashore now to rest and grow strong; through time and careful nursing, but "our Spartacus will fight again in Capua" is the earnest hope of all his friends.

TOM THUMB is dead. The men who are taking care of big families now, who are sitting in Congress, editing newspapers, conducting big law suits and making patent medicines, were delighted as children by this same "Gen. TOM THUMB." His name was CHAS. H. STRATTON, and he was produced in Connecticut—the land of maple nutmegs and other small innocent frauds. He was a dwarf of unusual good appearance and precocity. He fell early into the hands of BARNUM, and that debonnair Emperor among weak-minded people in search of amusements humbugged the country with the little sawed-off man for a quarter of a century. Mr. THUMB grew fat and repulsive in time and scores of smaller and better looking dwarfs came upon the stage, but there was magic in his soubriquet and power in the advertising which BARNUM gave him and he kept on making money. He was out on an exhibition tour last winter, and came near being destroyed in the Newhall House fire in Milwaukee. He was forty-six years of age, was wealthy and the disease which carried him off was apoplexy. Of late years he was said to be a rather dissolute dwarf. At one time he owned a yacht. The generation of grey-beard men and matronly women who knew him as a childish curiosity, will regret his demise, no doubt, and regret that he did not retire from public life before he grew gross and gouty.

A GENTLEMAN across the river addresses us the following note:

EDWARDSVILLE, July 15, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am a constant reader of your spicy sheet, and observe that you answer very kindly all interrogatories propounded to you. The advocates of the National Banks tell us that Congress has no constitutional power to issue treasury notes, or greenbacks, except in case of a war. I want to know what kind or character of a war it takes to legalize greenbacks. Must it be war to suppress rebellion, or will an Indian war suffice; or can a few greenbacks be issued in case of a little war, and a greater amount in the event of a big war? By answering the above you will confer a great benefit on a host of doubting Thomases, and place yourself, in our estimation, on the top round for statesmanship. INQUIRER.

There is nothing to prevent Congress from coining money, borrowing money, or emitting bills of credit or money notes. The Supreme Court has decided that Congress can do this in case of necessity. Our civil war created a necessity. It is not necessary to have war in order to have greenbacks. Congress could start the flow of greenbacks in a season of profound peace—if, in its supreme judgment, there was a demand in the country for that especial variety of currency.

NOT since the stirring days of the attempted impeachment of the late political smooth-bore, ANDREW JOHNSON, has the country stood face to face with such a crisis as that involved in the proposed impeachment of the Mayor of St. Louis. We take it for granted that the Solid Seven will certainly present the Mayor on charges of the most hideous character. It will be a serious day when the vapid VASTINE rises in the Council Chamber, his coat-tail fluttering with emotion like the caudal feathers of a [illegible] jay-bird on a timber limb, and with a vasaline voice proceeds in the most solemn manner to impeach BILL in the name of an Outraged Municipality; in the name of two thousand disappointed Office Seekers; in the sacred name of Pap and in behalf of the entire human race, including Indians, untaxed, and aliens who have not taken out their first papers. We are moving and living in the midst of a Grand and Awful Time, when we come to consider politics, cyclones, cholera and other natural phenomena.

THE Memoirs of DORSEY are being drawn upon again. His letter clip has been fumbled, and we have in our dispatches to-day some startling revelations touching his bargains with GARFIELD, the corruption fund in Indiana and other political events of great moment. There was a time, it seems, when the late Mr. GARFIELD could throw his arms about the talented Star-router and call him "Steve, old boy." Mr. DORSEY is in a fair way to become a troublesome leviathan. An effort will probably be made now to "draw his tongue with a chord, put a hook in his nose or bore his jaw through with a thorn." We would recommend the thorn treatment.

OUR able and conservative Police Board will not attempt to enforce the Sunday closing law in a wholesale way. There will be no whooping-up on the part of the police or raiding or arresting in St. Louis. The police will quietly inform the Courts when the Sunday laws are infringed and the Courts can then proceed with the procedure, so to speak. This will make Mr. JEEMES ROBERT CLAIBORNE, the Prosecuting Attorney of the Court of Criminal Correction, a very conspicuous, not to say attractive person, for the next few months.

IT may be possible that cholera has already obtained a foothold in London. No quarantine regulations have been established there, and scores of vessels have doubtless landed in the "pool" within the past fortnight fresh from the disease-stricken ports of the Mediterranean. If cholera has reached London, it will certainly arrive on our shores before the season is over. Our ocean steamers are only ferry-boats now, and the army of American tourists will soon come rolling home with pestilence in its garments.

DENIS KEARNEY, the disturbing blatherskite, was refused permission to lift up his voice in a Labor Union Convention in New York city yesterday. One person wanted to know what labor organization DENIS represented, and another very pertinently inquired where he obtained the money to make the long trip from San Francisco to New York. We are pleased to observe that DENIS is still able to hire a hall occasionally. This indicates that there are profits in doing nothing.

A GRAND raffle of "the largest diamond in the United States" is advertised to come off at the People's theater in this city at an early day. A raffle is a game of chance—a lottery. The gentlemen who are backing this scheme are violating the stringent anti-gambling law of the state, and they do not seem to be aware of it. It moves our compassion to see human beings marching unwittingly into trouble. It would be wise to indefinitely postpone this public raffle.

MESSRS. BASHAW, PHELPS, CAMPBELL and the other Democratic candidates for Governor are still keeping dark on the Prohibition question. The exasperating BROOKS and the avenging SWITZLER are abroad and no politician with the Gubernatorial wasp in his bonnet will be permitted to hide in the chapparal this season. Some doubt has been expressed as to whether the meek really inherit the earth.

MR. CHESTER H. KRUM was amply vindicated in the Probate Court this morning. His management of the FORD estate was shown to be wise, honest and correct. He was complimented by the court. Hereafter when an overworked, diffident barrister goes off on a quiet summer vacation it would be well for the newspapers to exhaust themselves in attending to their own business.

What Bill Says.

"Let 'em impeach," the Mayor said,
And then his valise he grabbed;
"I'm off to serve in old Hymen's court,
I've been matrimonially nabbed.

"You may say to the Seven, and I mean it, too,
No doubt they'll raise a big howl,
But Ewing, Bill, wan't born in the woods,
To be scairt by a hooting owl."

THE METROPOLITAN PRESS.

What the Editors of the New York Journals Are Saying To-Day.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The Times says: "A journal which took early occasion to proclaim the spotlessness of Mr. Horton's character, hopes that the Times is satisfied now that Evans has revoked Horton's appointment. We dislike to appear insatiable, but we only speak for a very large part of the Republican party in saying that the President would do well to invite Mr. Evans to follow Mr. Horton."

THE SUN.

The Sun, in its comments on Garfield's duplicity, says: "By no possibility could Garfield's tenure of the presidential office have exceeded a single term, nor could the Republican party have survived the irreparable blunder committed in his nomination. Racked by conflicting fears, and handcuffed by irreconcilable obligations, he was fated to stagger from one dereliction to another, now sacrificing his best friends to save reputation, now breaking one compact to avert the publication of another, and now debasing the purest and most majestic functions of America's chief magistrate, in order to slake the greed or glut the spite of men whose hands were at his throat. It is probably happy for his memory that he died before the bitter day of accounting and exposure came, for over much that might have sunk the living man in obloquy death has cast the decent shroud of silence and mercy. Not the less must we recognize in this man the Belshazzar of the Republican regime, and in the feuds for which his acts were mainly responsible the hand writing on the wall."

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "It must be admitted that the condition of many of the large industries in this country is such as to challenge serious consideration. But as the symptoms are nearly alike in every case it ought to be easy to recognize the cause and prescribe a remedy. The fact that many commodities are almost unmarketable, that there is an excess of supply over the immediate demand and that prices have reached the lowest limits compatible with a continuance of production, shows beyond all reasonable doubt that the productive capacity of manufactures has outrun the power of the nation to absorb and consume the products."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "The contest over the United States Senatorship in New Hampshire has been represented in many quarters as an indication that the Republican party in that State was all out of joint and going to pieces. It is nothing of the kind, as is shown in a review of the situation which appears in another column of this paper. Mr. Rollins' defeat is properly attributed to the activity of the personal enemies whom he has been unfortunate enough to make. But the party is all right and likely to come out of the struggle entirely uninjured. A good man will doubtless be sent to the Senate and the Republicans will carry the State next year as usual."

POLITICAL POINTERS.

GOVERNOR WALLER, of Connecticut, will not be a candidate for reelection. He wants to be Vice-President.

THE free-for-all race in the New Hampshire Legislature has not yet developed a favorite for the pool-sellers, and Secretary Chandler's mother is still sick.

CINCINNATI ENQUIRER: Those Presidential candidates in Indiana, New York and other parts of the country should not make so much noise. There is a hen on in Ohio.

WE are beginning to hear frequently from the New York end of the "old ticket." All the sounds from that direction are confirmatory of what the Indiana end has said.

MR. DORAN, a Democratic editor of Dayton, O., expresses the hope that Mr. Hoadly will run 10,000 votes behind his ticket to rebuke the managers for their undemocratic methods.

RUMOR states that ex-Minister Washburne, of Illinois, is engaged in writing a book, the purpose of which will be to make himself prominent for the Vice-Presidential nomination in 1884.

MR. JOHN STEWART, last year's Independent candidate for the Governorship of Pennsylvania, is severely criticised in Independent quarters for joining in the Stalwart abuse of Gov. Pattison in the Legislature.

As an indication that there is to be an unusual amount of independent voting in Iowa this year, the declaration of ex-Secretary Kirkwood that he shall not vote for the Republican candidate for Supreme Judge is significant.

EX-SENATOR SIMON CAMERON takes great interest in fish culture. He has a trout-stream, whose mottled denizens leap out of the water to catch bits of bread which he throws to them. Perhaps he is angling for Arthur.

OF all the prominent Republican statesmen who are supposed to consider themselves eligible for the office of President of the United States, there does not seem to be one who is especially eager to become the candidate of his party.

ONLY seven of the Northern States hold elections which are of any importance this fall. They are Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Iowa and Minnesota. They all vote in November, except Ohio, which votes in October. These States all supported Garfield except New Jersey, which barely went for Hancock.

PERSONAL POINTS.

—Lord Salisbury personally superintends the cultivation of several of his farms near London.

—Clarence King, the American geologist, is receiving much attention in London, and has taken dinner with the queen.

—They say that Tabor is dissipating his immense fortune very rapidly. But not faster, perhaps, than it is getting away with him.

—Ex-Governor Stanford of California owns one ranch at Vienna, Tehama county, covering 25,000 acres of land. It will be planted in grapes.

—Courier-Journal: It must have been interesting when those two noble red men, Tomaskat and Lone Dog, used to meet on the war-path.

—It is said that Prince Bismarck feels very keenly the artificiality of Berlin, its artistic and literary sterility, and that he does not love the city.

—"The average reformer is not sufficiently alive to the difference between a martyr and a bore," says the Rochester Post-Express in speaking of Bradlaugh.

—John Banyard, the veteran artist and traveler, whose panoramas were famous a century or more ago, is settled in Waterton, D. T., where he has a son a banker.

—Mr. Stilson Hutchins of the Washington Post will return from his European wedding-tour in a few weeks. He has a beautiful new house on Massachusetts avenue, next to Senator Windom's.

—The Evening Telegram, noticing the convention of the editors of the amateur press, calls them "the future Nestors." So they are: the future Nestors but the present nesters, says the New York World.

—The characters in Disraeli's novel, "Lothair," are to be plentiful in America next year. M. Capel, the papist, is coming over to lecture, and the heroine of the book, Lady Lansdowne, is the wife of the new Governor-General of Canada.

—General John Newton, president of the Society of the Army of the Potomac, has been invited to attend the reunion of Parson's Cavalry Brigade (Confederate), at Dallas, Texas, on August 6, and to respond to the toast, "The Boys who Wore the Blue."

—General Thomas T. Eckert, the real executive officer of the Western Union Telegraph company, is an Ohio man, who began at the bottom of the ladder, and was once on a country newspaper. His countenance is of a boyish cast and his address pleasing.

—Don Sebastian Lerdo de Tejada, who was cheated out of the Mexican Presidency by Diaz, lives in a hotel much frequented by Mexicans in New York city, but he will not leave his room when there are Mexicans in the house whom he dislikes. He frequently remains a voluntary prisoner a month at a time.

CUPID'S CAPERS.

INDIAN wives are cheap in Montana. A Chinaman at Benton bought a Piegan squaw and her papoose for two sacks of musty flour.

NEW ORLEANS PICAYUNE: In modern Egypt a young man is not permitted to see his wife's face before marriage. Under this arrangement the freckle-faced girl finds no difficulty in working herself off on the matrimonial market.

A FRENCH lion-tamer quarreled with his wife, a powerful virago, and was chased by her all around his tent. On being sorely pressed, he took refuge in the cage among the lions. "Oh, you contemptible coward!" she shouted; "come out if you dare!"

BURLINGTON FREE PRESS: "Were you in the late war?" asked a veteran of a badly-demoralized citizen, who came hobbling down the street on a crutch. "I don't know how late you mean," was the sad reply. "She gave me this one last night before tea."

COURIER-JOURNAL: A Philadelphia husband gave his wife three trade dollars to buy marketing. She couldn't pass them, and the husband got drunk. Then she sarcastically asked him if he had got drunk on trade dollars. Then he beat her. Then she got him arrested. No marriage can be truly happy where husband and wife undertake to discuss the nation's finances.

"THE best husband I ever met," says a living writer, "came out of a family where the mother—a heroic and self-denying woman—laid down the absolute law, 'Girls first'—not in any authority, but first to be thought of as to protection and tenderness. Consequently the chivalrous care which the lads were taught to show to their own sisters naturally extended itself to all women."

ELDER MEASU, a Mormon, arrived recently from Europe with three women he intends to marry in Utah. No. 1, cook, washerwoman; No. 2, a governess, and No. 3, young and pretty, his "fancy."

ABOUT WOMEN.

PARISIAN beauties now wear the hair combed back from the forehead.

KATE CLAXTON, the actress, is summering and simmering at Patchogue.

MARY LAFFAN, the Irish novelist, has married Prof. MacNabb of Edinburgh.

A BUCHANAN (Mich.) school mistress punishes refractory children by making them stand in an empty barrel.

THE fashion news from Paris is that in some of the new evening toilets for women the left shoulder is wholly bared.

NEW YORK belles buy close-fitting bathing suits of rubber in which they frisk about in the surf without getting wet.

A WICKED Frenchman says that a woman is always disposed to take as admiration the curiosity or the desire that she inspires.

THE latest eccentricity of servant girls in Philadelphia is to have their mistresses arrested and bound over to keep the peace.

THE Baroness Wilson, the Spanish authoress, will soon establish a paper in the City of Mexico advocating a closer union between the inhabitants of the Latin and American countries.

NATURALISTS say that feminine birds are as fond of bright colors as women, and frequently bedeck themselves with colored threads and ravelings so as to bring out their complexion.

CINCINNATI ENQUIRER: England will please "assist" no more of her alleged beauties to immigrate to America. We can put up with her paupers, if need be, but not with her "beauties."

LADIES who are in the habit of wearing green velvet will be interested to know that a young lady in Bloomington, Ill., recently had a dangerous experience in blood-poisoning by handling the goods. The prick of a needle admitted the poisonous matter to her system and she narrowly escaped death.

THE unpleasant scandal about the unfortunate young Duchess de Chaulnes is now at an end. Her inexorable mother-in-law, the Duchess de Chevreuse, has at last consented that the body shall be exhumed from its temporary resting place in the Church of St. Thomas d'Aquin, in Paris, and laid in the family tomb at Sable.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Where the Readers of The Post-Dispatch Find a Hearing.

ST. LOUIS, July 16, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

There is a cigar store on Chestnut street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth, and said tobacco mart is kept by a woman who owns an orguinette, (an offshoot of the hand-organ) and who plays sundry tunes, viz.: Hymns, waltzes, marches, etc., on said ingenious piece of mechanism which is intended to make noise concordant and sweet, in patches, bunches, rows and dashes. On Thursday night the last note of "Nearer, my God, to Thee" was ground out at three minutes of twelve o'clock; Friday night, the final "squawk" of that beautiful hymn (when not murdered in cold blood) died on the gas-glinting air at just fourteen minutes of twelve o'clock, and on Saturday night the last hole of the several feet of the perforated, tune-burdened paper was reached at exactly ten minutes after one o'clock by the watch—and no "watch" by! Now, what I wish the amiable editor to inform his unamiable correspondent (so made by loss of sleep) is: 1. Is there not an ordinance to prevent "loud and unusual noises" at unseasonable hours? 2. Is not twelve o'clock an unseasonable hour for operatic performances on either a cracked fiddle or a mahogany orguinette, with male and female voice accompaniment four stories high and one league in length? 3. If it is true that "man has sought out many inventions for his own destruction," is not the orguinette one of them? SOMNOLENT.

Prof. Davidson's Views.

ST. LOUIS, July 16, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Your very scholary letters from Italy by Prof. Davidson are wonderfully interesting, and especially to me, because I have the profoundest respect for Rosmini's philosophy, whose disciple Davidson seems to be. Rosmini's critique of the famous systems of philosophy commands unbounded admiration. I shall always feel grateful to Bishop Ryan for putting me in the way of becoming acquainted with Rosmini. Some of the disclosures of Prof. Davidson's state of mind, and some of his criticisms on Christian churches are certainly original and unique. His statement of the vital facts of religion and philosophy as deduced from Rosmini is very remarkable. First, "That the individual soul is eternal;" secondly, "that its weal and woe depend entirely upon how it acts." While having the highest regard for Prof. Davidson, it seems to me that the conclusions which he reaches, with such painful processes through Rosmini, he could have learned from any Sunday-school teacher, and could have heard insisted upon in every church. Prof. Davidson learns through philosophy what Jesus taught long ago by the wayside and the Temple of Jerusalem. For one I should be delighted to have Prof. Davidson come to St. Louis and develop his two propositions—the eternal nature of the soul and its responsibility. He would have audiences here of thoughtful people. M. W. WILLIS.

The Poor Dogs in the Pound.

ST. LOUIS, July 16, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Reading an article from the Boston Globe as to their humane and almost painless method of destroying unlicensed dogs, I would ask what the process is in St. Louis. I am told that the most barbarous butchery is practiced, such as knocking in the head, cutting throats, shooting, etc. It is also reported that the dog-catchers are unnecessarily cruel to the animals in lassoing—sometimes bruising, breaking bones and otherwise maiming them. I think that persons, whether legally authorized or not, who would abuse any dumb animal without cause or just provocation are worse than brutes themselves. SUBSCRIBER.

[They used to brain and drown the dogs in our pound, but now they humanely asphyxiate them with carbonic acid gas—otherwise known as the fumes of charcoal.—ED. P.-D.]

TRUTH ABOUT TILDEN.

Mr. Pulitzer Takes a Ride With Him in the Cars.

From the New York World, 14th.

The editor of the World accidentally enjoyed the pleasure of Mr. Tilden's company while the latter came in yesterday from Yonkers. We are prepared to dispose alike of the sensational stories of Mr. Tilden's extreme weakness and of the equally sensational stories of his exceptional vigor.

In the first place, Mr. Tilden must be an early riser, as he boarded the train which leaves Tarrytown a few minutes after eight. In the next place, Mr. Tilden was not accompanied by any servant. In the third place, Mr. Tilden's walk is perfectly easy and his figure more erect than that of most people of his age.

He walked down the aisle of one of the ordinary cars quietly and naturally. With his plain straw hat, his clean-shaven face, he attracted no more attention than any of the thousand elderly business men who come into New York on the morning trains of the Hudson River road.

As to his health, we are not prepared to give a physician's diagnosis nor a physician's certificate. But if clearness of complexion and brightness of the eye are safe indications, Mr. Tilden is certainly as healthy a man as he was seven years ago. His complexion is certainly fresher and healthier and his look has no indication of weakness about it.

The partial paralysis or palsy or nervous affection or whatever it is, of his right arm and hand continues, and he is probably unable to make any efficient use of that arm. But as for his going to sleep or slipping from his seat or needing assistance, it is absurd. The "Southern Congressman's" description is so evidently borrowed from Dicken's description of Grandfather Smallweed as not to need notice.

Mr. Tilden's voice has not changed noticeably. It is hardly strong enough to be heard across the roar and rattle of a railroad train speeding by the cuts and hillsides, but his voice was never strong. When a man habitually talks in a low tone of voice as Mr. Tilden has done always, it is a sign that his vocal muscles and organs are not strong. A low voice is a type of character, just as a loud voice is a type of another kind of character. At no period of his life could Mr. Tilden have been a loud-voiced speaker like one of Shakespeare's "robustious, periwig-pated fellows," but his enunciation is not affected in any way, and, except when his voice was drowned by the noise of the train, his remarks reached his hearer.

He talked freely and fluently; whatever impairment his body may have suffered his mind is as clear as ever. His memory is remarkably retentive and accurate, extending to trifling incidents that one would hardly expect him to recall. He talked about politics, about the Electoral Commission, the dangers of interviewing and other natural topics of a half hour's ride. There is no doubt that he still maintains the same keen interest in and intelligent attention to politics and to business.

Is he a candidate for the Presidency?

He does not look like a man who is worrying himself about it.

But we are inclined to think that Mr. Tilden is not very angry to hear himself talked about for the nomination. In fact, we rather judge from his healthy complexion that he could be persuaded to serve another term.

Mr. Chandler's Navy.

From the New York World.

Let us see: this is a model government? Why yes, cert'nly. And the penalty for a naval commander who gets drunk and runs his ship on a rock and murders eleven poor enlisted men, drowned while he is lifted in his drunken sleep into his gig, is—dismissal from the navy. The water is deep by the Brothers' Rock and no cry from the drowned victims can reach the secretary of the navy in his granite palace—no ghosts arise to bar his pathway to the Senate.

Politics and the Press.

New York Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

There are indications here of a stand-off fight between the supporters of McDonald and Tilden. The Sun, through Dorsheimer, is hedging toward McDonald apparently, while the Times, which is more Democratic than Republican now, is becoming Tilden's organ. The Tribune seems to stand in well with Arthur's administration, which formerly always spoke through the Times. The latter paper has recently been encouraging Hoadly's canvas in Ohio, and seems generally disgruntled and unhappy. The changes in the press here are marked by all readers. Party demoralization has extended to the editors and Presidential campaigns seem to be run on lines of personal acquaintance and advantage, or upon suspicions of this or that candidate being too friendly to the opposition sheet. Among the people there is no political vitality at all. The Presidency has become the prey of cliques and of self-seekers.

It would appear that Hoadly, Tilden and Hendricks have formed a cooperative society and are to insist upon the old ticket again, and Hoadly to get his reward in the cabinet or foreign service thereof. The main opposition to this comes from McDonald and John Kelly. The State administration of New York is for Tilden. Kelly might persuade Butler to run as an independent Democrat for President. If Tilden and Hendricks be nominated two aged roadsters will be seen pulling the gilt band-wagon and both dying in the shafts. A President of the Senate chosen by the survivors of the late Confederacy will reign in A. Lincoln's stead.

A Happy Old Man.

From the New Orleans Picayune.

The happiest old man in the world is one who has a pair of old-fashioned suspenders over his shoulders, and has nothing in the world to do but chew tobacco all day in the village saloon, watching the players at pin-pool. What he was before the war is not a circumstance to his present bliss.

SUNDAY IN ST. LOUIS.

One Hundred Thousand People in the Parks, Beer Gardens and Other Resorts.

How the People Pass the Sabbath—Open Air Recreation—One-Third of the Inhabitants Seek Amusement in Various Unoffending Ways—Sunshine and Fresh Air the Public's Desire—Facts and Figures for the Admirers of Blue Sunday.

With a view to ascertaining how far the people of St. Louis spend Sunday afternoons out of doors, and in pursuit of what has been termed "worldly pleasure," POST-DISPATCH reporters were yesterday detailed to visit all those points where Sunday crowds do most congregate. The canvass was made thoroughly, and the estimates of attendance will be found as nearly accurate as possible, while in some instances the figures given are official. Many of the small parks and minor resorts were omitted in the expedition, but facts were gained that show that fully 100,000 people each Sunday find relaxation and recreation in the public and private parks of St. Louis and vicinity.

Forest Park.

As Forest Park was entered at 4 o'clock the broad smooth roadways in every direction were fairly alive with carriages. Pouncing under the trees, the reporter noticed in a random drive upwards of a hundred family picnic parties. Spring wagons and vehicles of all shapes permitted in the park had been utilized to bring the parties out early in the morning for a full day's pleasure, as was shown by the presence of hampers, long since rifled of their good things. Reclining in a leafy chamber formed by the interlacing tops of lofty trees, a dozen young men smoked cigarettes and idly contemplated the bicycles on which they had made the trip. A few yards away, a party of young ladies in attractive summer attire were making merry at archery, while the old folks looked contentedly on, and several small children, exhausted in the chase for pleasure, slept placidly on the ground. Another place where several families had evidently combined for a day's pleasure, a young lady, true to her nature, was rearranging her hair, in the reflection of a little round mirror hung to a tree, while her late companion in the game of "copenhagen" awaited the completion of repairs to resume their harmless sport. "We have no way to get at the attendance," said a mounted policeman, "because there are so many entrances, but I have been out here for a long time and I would estimate that on a good Sunday like this the park is visited by from 1,200 to 1,500 vehicles. Several hundred people, generally family parties, come out here every Sunday on the Wabash trains. By the way, what a shame it is that the park commissioner seems unable to force the Wabash to build a depot here, in accordance with their compact when they were granted right of way through the park. If the elevated railway or the Narrow Gauge ran to the park, there would be 20,000 people here every Sunday, working people, I mean, who cannot afford a vehicle. A common street car line would have more business than it could attend to, unless it ran cars every minute. At Col. Herbert's club-house the breezy verandahs were crowded with Sunday pleasure-seekers of the very best class, the majority of whom were drinking beer. Mr. Herbert said that up to that hour, 4:30 p. m., his place had been visited by about 800 vehicles, the greater number being family parties.

Tower Grove.

The best way to reach Tower Grove Park from Forest Park is to leave the park from the south entrance and take the dirt road leading through Sheltenham. On the drive to the east gate of Tower Grove the reporter counted the vehicles en route for Forest Park with a result of 146. The keeper of the Tower Grove gate has ceased his old habit of making a count of all vehicles going in and out, but to the reporter said: "The attendance this afternoon has been as large to-day as on any Sunday this summer. You might roughly estimate it at 1,200 vehicles. There are so many carriages and barouches, that three people to a vehicle would be a fair estimate. The coaches have been doing a good business all day, and the three lines of street cars approaching the park have brought out at least 800 people, mostly children.

Around the music stand, where an excellent band renders a concert programme each Sunday, carriages were densely massed, and at the hour of the reporter's visit, 5 p. m., at least 1,000 people were enjoying the melodious strains and the audience were constantly shifting, there being a nearly general movement of the vehicles at the conclusion of each selection, the places of the departures being promptly filled by recent arrivals. The pedestrians, of whom there were perhaps 500, remained in their shady seats under the trees, and listened to the programme throughout. Nothing in the line of refreshments can be obtained at Tower Grove, but the popular resorts just outside of the gates, notably Andy Auer's, on Grand avenue, were doing an immense business. The latter has quite an extensive garden attached to his place, and enjoyed an average patronage of 500 people throughout the afternoon hours. A fair majority of the carriages emerging from the park were stopped here, while the horses were watered, and beer was brought to the occupants by the outside waiters.

At the Base Ball Park.

At the base ball park at least 14,000 gathered to witness the game. The crowd was quiet, orderly and respectable. As an evidence of this fact it may be stated that, although crowds averaging 10,000 people have been in attendance every Sunday during base ball weather for the last three years, no disturbance of any kind has ever occurred. The audience yesterday comprised all classes of people. A number of ladies were scattered around through the crowd. Among them were dotted prominent business men, lawyers, doctors, etc. Although young men and boys constitute a good proportion of the attendance, yet people who believe that old men are not base-ball cranks would be much disappointed in looking over the packed seats at any Sunday game. The crowd enjoyed itself in the usual way, the only sign of anything like disorder being an occasional tendency on the part of a few of those in the uncovered seats to hiss the umpire, a demonstration which was always drowned by the cheers of the other parts of the crowd. Beer was so'd and drank freely during the game, but beside this there was little objectionable.

Schnaider's Garden.

"Walk through here with me," said Jos. M. Schnaider, at his well-known resort last night, "and let us see what character of people visit beer gardens. There is not a seat to be had, you will see. That means that there are now 6,000 people at these tables. Here we are elbowing 2,000 more in these aisles. Hundreds of these people do not sit down at all, do not drink any beer, but come here to listen to the music, get the fresh air and see the crowd and illumination. Judge for yourself the character of the attendance and see how many people you will find under the influence of liquor. By a system of signals and telegraph we can communicate with any point in the garden in a minute. There has only been one arrest in this garden in nine years and that was a judge's son. A man under the influence of liquor cannot buy a glass of beer for $100 nor can any man buy a drink of liquor under any circumstances." While the crowd was largest at this garden last night a circuit was made of the place. The attendance was of a varied character. All classes were represented. The majority were clerks, salesmen, etc., while here and there sat a group of stylishly dressed young men. Not the slightest action or word approaching a disturbance was discovered. Towards midnight the musical programme was concluded and the crowd rapidly thinned out. On figuring up the attendance it was estimated that the garden was visited by 12,000 people yesterday.

Lafayette Park.

A close estimation, arrived at by street-car calculation and questioning the officers doing duty in Lafayette Park, put the attendance yesterday at between 10,000 and 12,000. In the morning the benches were occupied by nurses, mothers and children and that large class of young men rooming in down-town buildings and breakfasting at down-town restaurants, who weekly seek the cool, shady spots in the park to read the papers. During the afternoon the attendance became more miscellaneous. That large class of people who object to visiting beer-gardens and similar resorts, but who must leave home for variety's sake, and see and touch grass and green trees at least once a week, was well represented. At seven o'clock there were 6,000 people in the park. After night the attendance again changed very decidedly. The family representation gradually disappeared, and loving couples flocked from all sides. Each pair turned towards the central point, and started diagonally across the shaded walk in search of some more shaded seat on a less frequented pathway. At ten o'clock the park was filled with these cooing couples, and only a few of the seats, located near the fences and visible from the street, were left vacant.

Tony Faust's

At Tony Faust's last night and all day yesterday the crowd was fully up to the average. In the terrace 42 ladies and 123 gentlemen were counted at eight o'clock. In the gentlemtnes dining-room 44, and in the ladies' dining-room 17 were counted at the same time. The number in the bar-room could hardly be ascertained, but if taken with the crowd that stood on the pavement about the doors, it would fall little short of 250. At this rate the number present would be about 476. Tho manager in the terrace was asked how many he thought present at the time. He replied:

"I don't know, but we generally have about 600 here at this time on Sunday night."

"Can you give an estimate of the number of visitors to the resort during the entire day?"

"Ten thousand on a Sunday like this, I think, is a fair estimate."

"On an average how often does this entire crowd change?"

"They are coming in and going out all the time, and I think they will change completely about every hour."

The people who visit this resort are of a substantial character. They are largely of foreign extraction and intermingled with some very wealthy and elegant people, you will find the bone and sinew of the city. The merchant and the professional man as well as the printer and the cigar maker may be seen in the terrace with his wife and his little daughter, sipping the wine and drinking the beer.

Carondelet Park.

The manifold beauties of this, the third driving park in extent in this city, are known to comparatively few of the people of St. Louis. It is rather difficult of approach, or rather difficult to find, and a few guide posts used in that quarter of the city would be appreciated by pleasure seekers. The people of Carondelet have long understood the beauties of the place. Park Commissioner Weigel has devoted much attention to it, and its graceful drives and beautiful vistas already commence to rival Tower Grove, the superb. When visited yesterday afternoon family picnic parties were observed scattered throughout the beautiful groves, and there was a constant stream of vehicles sweeping over the graveled drives. The park-keeper one Sunday counted 600 vehicles enter the east gate. What is wanted is a street-car connection with Carondelet avenue and this would at once become one of the most popular of our system of breathing spots.

On the Bridge.

Approaching the ticket office at about seven o'clock, shortly after the night officer had taken charge, the reporter asked:

"How many promenaders have been on the bridge to-day?"

"I don't know," he answered; "about 4,000 I guess. The crowd is just beginning to come on now. It was too hot all day."

"How long do they continue to linger on the bridge at night?"

"They commence to come on at seven o'clock in the morning, if the weather is suitable, and on Sunday night they stay on in crowds till near midnight, and many of them are on the bridge till two o'clock in the morning."

By referring to the day officer's report it was found that the number of fares paid up to six o'clock was 3,328.

Calvary Cemetery.

On the reporter's arrival at Calvary cemetery he found quite a throng of people passing in and out of the main entrance in about equal numbers. The sexton explained this by stating that the people did not remain in the cemetery very long as a rule. "They visit the graves of their departed friends," he said, "and after staying a short time they go home again."

"Do you keep a record of the number of people who visit the cemetery?"

"No, we keep no account of visitors; but I think there must have been 4,000 or 5,000 people here to-day, and during the months of May and June the number of visitors is far greater than in this month."

"How do you account for that?"

"Well, in the early part of the season, when improvements are being made, people generally have more interest in the cemetery. Now, since the hot weather is on hand, they don't come out so much."

"Do any come here on Sunday simply to spend the day?"

"Very few. The interest they feel in their friends who are buried here is what brings most of them out. If you take a walk through the grounds you may be able to form an idea of what brings so many people here on Sunday."

Following the suggestion, the reporter soon found himself on an elevation where the absence of small trees and shrubbery permitted an extended range of vision on all sides. Hundreds of people were in view, and idle dalliance and amusement seemed to form no part of their business among the graves. The aspect of the entire collection of people wore a tinge of seriousness. Here is a mother with her grown son and two little daughters, shedding tears over the grave of a departed loved one. She does not hesitate to give vent to her feelings in audible tones of lamentation. She is consoled by her son and her little girls, who cling lovingly to her skirts. After standing by the grave a few minutes they all kneel and a moment is spent in devotion to heaven for the departed soul. A single bouquet is placed on the grave and the mourners solemnly move away, take their carriage and depart. An examination of the inscription on the tombstone disclosed the fact that the departed was a husband and father, of sixty-three years of age, who was laid in the tomb more than two years ago. A few minutes observation here showed that nearly, if not quite, everybody who visited the graves of departed friends, knelt and offered a prayer for the departed spirits. There was no sitting about on seats, there was no lounging about under the trees. Everybody stood up, spoke in subdued tones, walked about slowly, on bended knees offered a prayer for the dead and then quietly departed.

At Bellefontaine

a scene differing much in appearance is presented. But few people, comparatively, were found roaming over its beautiful and well-trimmed hills and dales. The air of solemnity was not so apparent. A young lady, beautifully dressed, sits on the seat beside a magnificent monument which probably marks the resting place of a departed merchant prince. She sits and fans herself and enjoys the beauties of nature that surround her. Young couples stroll about leisurely, rest on the seats by the graves, laugh and talk and enjoy life. Older people and children sit in groups under the trees, chat and enjoy the breezes, while in retired places men in twos and threes stretch themselves upon the grass, rest and smoke. Handsome carriages, occupied by elegant people, driving slowly to and fro and stopping occasionally to view the family lot, complete the scene.

The superintendent when asked for an estimate of the number of people who visited the cemetery on Sunday said:

"Not so many as a person would think from observation. Before we commenced to keep an account of visitors, I thought that not less than 1,000 carriages drove in here every month. Since we began to keep record at the beginning of the year, I find that the number does not exceed 500. The number of carriages to-day is 187, and the number of foot passengers 342. In all, I think about 1,000 people come here on a Sunday."

At Koerner's Garden,

formerly Staehlin's, 2,000 people were seated between eight and nine o'clock last evening, listening to the orchestra and watching the display of fireworks. Mr. Koerner, the proprietor, was seen and said: "I think I have a right to keep open, and if I have I will spend every cent I make to establish my right. This place is orderly. I do not have any police officers here because I have no need of them. To-day I calculate between 5,000 and 6,000 people visited the garden and there was not the slightest trouble." This garden, located in a more quiet portion of the city than others of its kind, is largely patronized by the residents of the southern portion of the city, though the car lines running in that locality brought large loads after nightfall from the central portion of the city. The people seated in the main portion of the garden, under the large pavilion, came in families, and while older members lunched and talked near the music-stand, the children romped about on the dancing-stand watching the fireworks. On the outside aisles the tables were principally occupied by parties of young couples.

Uhrig's Cave.

Sunday night always finds Uhrig's Cave crowded during the opera season. "What more rational way to spend a Sunday evening?" said Manager Short. "Here we have, according to the box-office receipts, close on to 1,000 people, sitting here under the trees sipping their beer and lemonade, keeping cool and listening to a first-class opera. Many of these people have no other time to visit the cave, being detained on week nights by business. To close us up would be to deprive these people of the brighest evening in their week." A glance at the audience showed it to have been recruited from the highly respectable and well-to-do classes. Stoddard addition had contributed freely to the throng, and it was equal in every respect to the assemblages of the week.

Benton Park,

which rivals Lafayette for beauty, but is not well known throughout the city, is becoming a popular resort. It is principally visited by families living in the southwestern portion of the city. Yesterday fully 2,000 people sought the shady seats, and of this number, 1,500 were residents of the vicinity.

The Water-Works.

At the high service water-works a good number of visitors were strolling about all day examining the new buildings in course of erection and satisfying their intuitive notions of sublimity by gazing on the powerful machinery in operation. An actual count showed sixty-three visitors at the works at four o'clock. When the engineer was asked how many people reported there on a Sunday he said: "About 1,000, I guess. They are around here most all day as thick as they are right now, and sometimes thicker." Looking over the register the reporter found the names of John Isaacs, Henry Cheatham, Jas. K. Watson, Theo. Mueller, Sam H. Walker, L. Marsh, George Mudd, Hilmer Bornmann, Otto Damm, Casper Suell, F. Donbeck, Francie Seitrich, J. J. Robinson and lady, Sophie Dierberger, Lizzie Jones, Mamie Marschnetz, M. M. Hyatt and lady, William Norris, Lou Amerlanch, Robt. A. Justice, Thomas Montgomery, William Nillis, Chas. Markland, F. B. Berry, Henriette L. Sullivan, Ben Skien and others who had registered during the day. Turning to the engineer he asked:

"Do many of the visitors write their names in this book?"

"Not one in twenty," he answered, "and we seldom ask any one to do it, except persons of some prominence, and those who ask questions and want to learn something."

"The engineer at the Lower Service Water-works placed his number of visitors on Sunday at 800. He said that they were in the habit of coming about the works late in the evening, mostly, and but few called there during the heat of the day. The visitors at these places were largely young men and women, as well as girls and boys. The older people keep away from there on such hot days.

Anthony & Kuhn's.

There was a concert, afternoon and evening, at Anthony & Kuhn's Brewery Garden. The services of twenty waiters were required by about 400 people in the afternoon and twice that number in the evening. Family groups predominated, and the attendance was principally of German American residents of the southern part of the city. The Sunday question was much discussed in German, and the closing of the gardens viewed only in the light of a calamity. Messrs. Anthony and Kuhn state that if ordered to close they will do so, and wait till the clouds roll by.

Fair Grounds

on a Sunday afternoon are patronized mostly by the merchants with their families and by the strangers in the city. A concert given yesterday by the Arsenal band brought out 1,500 people, mostly middle-aged men and women, with children. The band was advertised to be in Buffalo, N. Y., yesterday and were not expected at the fair grounds till noon, which reduced the attendance considerably. The attendauce at the fair grounds on some concert Sundays sometimes reaches 4,000. The zoological gardens draw on an average 500 people every Sunday. The day is spent in watching the animals or strolling over the grounds.

The West End Narrow Gauge

Ran five extra trains yesterday to accommodate the pleasure seekers going to Florissant and Normandy. The trains to Florissant carried about five hundred young men and ladies to the Jewish picnic held there. The Normandy trains carried about two hundred people.

River Excursions.

The river excursions on Sunday are always well patronized, especially if clear weather happens to prevail on that day. Yesterday was no exception to the rule, and the Chas. P. Chouteau was engaged by Lafayette council, American Legion of Honor, and between 1,300 and 1,400 persons boarded the craft for Ihorn's grove, below here. The Colorado had out the National and Local Engineers for a point above Alton. She had fully 1,000 persons on herself and barge. Com. Manion, her owner, says he secured the services of the tug Gartside to make doubly sure that no accident should occur.

Railroad Excursionists.

The number of people leaving the city by rail on Sunday forms no small part of the weekly exodus of the heat and dust-ridden population. Yesterday morning, at the Union Depot, was exceptionally lively because of the excursions to the National Saenger fest at Buffalo. The O. & M. secured the contract to carry the local societies that went to the fest, and, as a matter of course, the greater number of visitors went by that route also. Besides the three regular daily trains, one in the morning and two in the evening, two special trains were run through to Buffalo solid, carrying the singers and bands, and enough visitors to swell the number to 800. On the three regular trains enough more left with the $12 50 tickets in their pockets to make the total pilgrimage to Buffalo at least 1,000. The Bee line also made the $12 50 rate and some hundreds took that route. Fully 1,500 St. Louisans therefore left the city for Buffalo and the East yesterday because of the low rate. The Schurtenfest at Belleville attracted fully 1,200 visitors, by far the greater portion going by the Cairo Short Line, the remainder by the L. & N. The L. & N. had a secret society excursion to Queen's lake that numbered perhaps 500 people. Through the concessions of the Gould roads in encouraging suburban travel, Creve Cœur lake, Forest park and Laclede are fast becoming exceedingly popular with Sunday picnickers. A careful estimate places the number to Creve Cœur Lake yesterday at 1,300, to Forest Park 1,000 and to Laclede 200. On those roads which make no effort to encourage travel to suburban cool places, and there are too many of such roads running into the city, an appreciable number left for short rides out into the country in the morning and returned in the evening. Two hundred would cover this class, including, perhaps, the fishermen and others who went to Fish Lake to catch the croppie and bass that are said to be so plentiful there. A general summary, therefore, of the people who left the city yesterday by rail, including those who went to Buffalo, would foot up about 6,000, and to say that on good weather Sundays at least 5,000 leave the city for a smell of pure air and a day of recreation, by rail, would not be an exaggeration.

Rinkle's Grove

adjoins the Sharpshooters' park. It is a well appointed park of forest trees and owned by George Rinkle, a well-known business-man and politician. It happened yesterday that there was no picnic in the garden. This is very unusual, as Mr. Rinkle explained, and a visit there any other Sunday would show the presence of from 1,000 to 1,500 persons. As it was the seats under the trees were occupied by perhaps 200 hundred quiet people, mostly German families, stopping for refreshments on their way to or home from the cemeteries that lie north of the St. Charles rock-road, and west of the railroad track. Rinkle's Grove is also a favorite resort of the people of Elleardsville.

Sharpshooters' Park.

At three o'clock, when a reporter visited the park of the St. Louis Shutzen Verein at Rinkleville, forty members of the association were banging away from the club-house ar the long range targets. Their families were disposed around tables beneath the noble trees in the adjoining park. The men were for the most part well-to-do and well-known citizens. The women and children were all well dressed, and seemed very happy in their surroundings. There were, perhaps, three hundred people at that hour in the park, and the attendance was being constantly added to. Waiters circulated through the crowd, supplying lemonade, beer and ice cream, while signs on the trees announced that "sauer kraut and wurst," and cheese of various kinds could be had on demand. One of the marksmen, an acquaintance of the reporter, explained that the attendance was nearly as large as usual, many members of the association having gone to Highland, Belleville, and other Sunday resorts of the sharpshooters. Nothing but practice shooting was going on. During the regular spring and summer tournament of the members, there are a thousand ,people in the park every Sunday.

The Public School Library

Opens at two o'clock on Sunday and closes at nine. The reading room is very fairly patronized even on the warm summer days. It is the resort of a class of men much of the same stam.p In age they will average from twenty-five to thirty-five. Very few of the regular habitues are above or below the ages mentioned. Many of them are tradesmen of a studions turn of mind. Some are laborers, others clerks and many are professional men, book-keepers, etc., and most of them are without family ties in the city, and therefore find this a pleasant and agreeable retreat in which to spend their leisure time.

At 2:30 p. m. yesterday the number in the reading-room was 102 and at eight o'clock it was forty-eight.

North St. Louis Turn Hall.

At the North St. Louis Turn hall, corner of Salsbury and Fourteenth streets, the socialists held a meeting from ten o'clock to 12:30. It was presided over by Fred Hoover, division chairman. The number that answered the roll-call was 93. Besides these quite a number of visitors were present. The meeting took into consideration a proposition to reorganize the association into a political machine. The speakers, who were quite numerous, displayed oratory and rhetoric enough and some logic, and the meeting finally came to the conclusion that a political engine was the very thing wanted and immediately elected delegates to attend a supreme council convention to be held some place, as yet unknown, in September.

Bodeman's Grove

was next on the circuit. It is located east of Grand avenue and south of Arsenal street. For the first time in many Sundays the grove was not in possession of a picnic. Ordinarily from 1,000 to 1,500 people can be found there. It is the favorite resort of the rowing clubs, a lake covering nearly forty acres affording an opportunity to display skill in aquatics. Yesterday afternoon the grove was in possession of a number of quiet families, all German, who drank beer and ate lunch, while the children rolled on the grass or played tag in the aisles of the grove. The attendance did not exceed 300. This is, however, very unusual. Mr. Bodeman, the proprietor is a member, of the School Board. He had not thought that the Sunday closing agitation was of sufficient earnestness and in sufficient good faith to worry himself about it. There were always a lot of people ready to demand the enforcement of some such ridiculous law as the Sunday law—measures that would never burden the statute books were any objection made at the time of introduction in the Legislature. The vast majority of the people in St. Louis were willing to allow their neighbors to pass Sunday in the manner that best suited them. Mr. Bodeman does not expect to hear further on the Sunday closing question from the police board. Should the order to close on Sunday be issued, he will then act in concert with his associates in business.

Bayer's Grove.

A picnic given by a social club attracted about two hundred persons to Bayer's grove on the St. Charles rock-road, near Taylor avenue. The crowd, consisting of young men and women ranging from fifteen to thirty-five years of age, commenced arriving about three o'clock in the afternoon, and dispersed about seven. The male attendance was as quiet and orderly as is usually found at such picnics. The female attendance consisted mostly of servant girls. The day was spent by most promenading the shady grove or drinking beer at the numerous tables under the trees. The Sunday attendance at this grove varies from one to six hundred.

Behind the Fair Grounds.

About 300 young men and small boys assemble on the prairies behind the fair grounds every Sunday from 9 o'clock in the morning till 4 in the afternoon either to participate in the numerous games of base ball or act as spectators. Two nines representing rival foundries played a nice, lively game yesterday, and monopolized the attention of nearly all assembled, although eight or nine other games were in progress. The second half of the third inning was in progress when the POST-DISPATCH reporter arrived. A man was on third base, and should he cross the home plate safely the score would be a tie. A favorable opportunity of making his run seemed to present itself, and the man on third base made a bold rush for home, touching the plate immediately after the catcher touched him with the ball. The umpire decided the runner out, and a grand kick followed. "Am I out?" asked the runner, quietly walking up to the umpire. "Of course you were, your own side knows you were," replied the umpire, turning toward the players for endorsement, but the only expression of opinion was by the man pronounced out, who drove away with his right hand, catching the umpire under the left ear, twirling him around, but preventing his falling by striking him a resounding blow on the right cheek. Some others, who had a keg of beer wagered on the game, crowded around and pummelled the umpire till, no doubt, he was thoroughly convinced he erred in his decision. The runner insisted he was not out and demanded his run be counted, but his opponents objected just as vigorously. A call was then made for another umpire. One young man said that he did not think he understood enough about the game to act as umpire, but he was very close to the last play and could decide the point under dispute. The runner was not out, having dodged the ball and touched the home plate, but before the young man could conclude his explanation he was struck in the stomach with a base ball bat. A long delay followed before an umpire could be found, and, although not less than three hundred men were present, it was almost impossible to find one who had confidence enough in himself to act as umpire.

Cherokee Garden.

At this resort, located at Cherokee street and Iowa avenue, high-toned German society can be seen at its best all day Sunday. It is a most beautiful grove of arbors, and has been a great Sunday attraction for many years; famous for its well-kept beer and its Schmier-kase. Its patrons come for the most part in carriages, and remain for an hour or so, drinking, lunching and chatting. The attendance yesterday afternoon was what a society reporter would call "large and fashionable," and embraced several well-known lawyers, a brace of ex-judges, several brewers, and quite a number of business men of high position in the community. Mr. Besch, the proprietor, waved his hand around and said, "That is the kind of people that these cold-water people say do not know how to take care of themselves. These people are told that they must not drink beer on Sunday, or come out for fresh air and a change of scene. Well, I'll tell you, when it comes down to business, I will back this crowd here against the same number of temperance fanatics for all that goes to make up good and useful citizens."

Hyde Park.

At Hyde park the crowd during the day was not large and was composed mostly of women and children. As the sun declined in the west the number began to increase and at dark not less than 1,000 people strolled about enjoying the evening breezes. They were of all ages and nationalities.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting, perhaps, from a trifling and unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proved its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL, a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

NOTICE TO THE HEIRS OF THOMAS COFFEY, deceased.—Thomas Coffey died April 24, 1881, at St. Vincent's Institution (an asylum for the insane), in the city of St. Louis; was an Irishman by birth, a laborer by occupation; he was a tall, spare made man, dark hair and eyes; he left an estate of eight hundred and thirty-five dollars and fifty-five cents ($835 55) in cash. At a final settlement of said estate, to be made in June next, there will be a balance due the heirs after payment of all legal demands of about two hundred and fifty dollars ($250). If this money is not claimed by June, 1884, it will be paid into the State Treasury.

DOCTOR
WHITTIER
617 St. Charles Street, St. Louis, Mo.,

A regular graduate of two medical colleges, has been longer engaged in the treatment of Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood Diseases than any other physician in St. Louis, as city papers show and all old residents know. Consultation at office or by mail, free and invited. A friendly talk or opinion costs nothing. When it is inconvenient to visit the city for treatment, medicine can be sent by mail or express everywhere. Curable cases guaranteed; where doubt exists it is frankly stated.

Nervous Prostration, Debility, Mental and Physical Weakness, Mercurial and other affections of Throat, Skin and Bones, Blood Impurities and Blood Poisoning, Skin Affections, Old Sores and Ulcers, Impediments to Marriage, Rheumatism, Piles. Especial attention to cases from over-worked brain. SURGICAL Cases receive Special Attention.

Diseases arising from Indiscretion, Excess, Exposure or Indulgence, producing some of the following effects: Nervousness, Debility, Dimness of Sight or Perverted Vision, Defective Memory, Pimples on the Face, Aversion to Society of Females, Want of Pleasure in Life, Want of Ambition, Unfitness to Marry, Melancholy, Dyspepsia, Headache, Restlessness, Loss of Spirits, Pains in the Back, etc., are treated with unparalleled success. Treatment without hindrance to business, safe, sure and permanent. Sent everywhere by mail or express.

It is self-evident that a physician paying particular attention to a class of cases attains great skill, and physicians in regular practice all over the country, knowing this, frequently recommend cases to this oldest office in America, where every known appliance is resorted to, and the proved good remedies of all ages and countries are used. A whole house is used for office purposes, and all are treated with skill in a respectful manner; and knowing what to do, no experiments are made.

AN OLD TALE.

Starved—starved—starved!
Yet queen of the feast was she,
And a liveried servant's ebony hands
Proffered the fruits of trophical lands
To her on bended knee;
Yet a horrible hunger night and day
Was gnawing her life and her strength away.

Dying—dying of thirst!
Tho' at her lightest will
The costliest wines like waters flowed,
Foamed in the crystal and gleamed and glowed,
But left her thirstier still;
And she felt that the fruit and the wine were curst,
For she starved with hunger and choked with thirst.

Many a suitor wooed,
For she was passing fair;
Fortunes were proffered, and jewels brought,
And challenges given, and duels fought;
But what did my lady care?
For she wasted her love, and she gave her heart
To one who haughtily stood apart.

She thirsted for one fond look—
She starved for a kiss denied;
But he cared no more for her smile or blush
Than the glacier cares for the red-rose bush;
And she pined away and died.
And true hearts mourned her many a year,
While the man she died for shed not a tear,
'Tis ever the way of the foolish fair
To die for the one who does not care.

APING THE ENGLISH.

Sleeping Cars, Sea Bathing and Scandal Obliterating Female Society.

Long Branch Cor. Courier-Journal.

When the British attempted, 100 years ago, to subjugate the United States, they signally failed. That which could not be accomplished by force of arms has been peacefully effected by fashion. To-day sees the wealth and social influence of this country entirely under the control of England. Parents who have marriageable daughters find a market for them in England. Those who do not succeed in marrying a British subject look to England for the style in which an American marriage shall be conducted. Our men own and run race-horses because the nobility of England do. Our young men refuse to become business men because the youth of England are idlers. They drive stage coaches because the young lords of the little isle fancy that occupation. They ape to be "cads" because that term is purely English. England dictates to this country in everything appertaining to folly, and we find married women aping the professional beauty business, and appearing in public with cavaliers, speaking with English abandon of matters which were once considered too indelicate for public discussion, and throwing aside that reserve which once was the characteristic of an American matron.

Evil influences are rapidly denationalizing our country, and in another hundred years we will be a hodge-podge of the vices of all nations. The fashionable summer resorts reveal the depravity which is undermining social life. Fast men and women are conspicuous at these places. They are seen bathing in the ocean and frolicking on the sands; they are seen at the races, on the piazzas and on the fashionable drives. They dress extravagantly, have fine horses and carriages, drink champagne and go in for a lively time. I once held sleeping-cars, sea-bathing and the Beecher scandal responsible for the loss of modesty in our women, and still think that these causes are potent factors in the general demoralization of those who travel much or grow accustomed to the sight of others in bathing dress, frolicking in the surf or sporting on the sands, or who have read the famous or infamous trial.

The Fourth of July was a splendid day here, and there were 900 guests at the West End Hotel. The bathing was delightful and hundreds went in the water, the temperature being 71°. The sun shone hot upon the sandy beach, and the summer houses and platforms were covered with spectators. There issued from a bath-house a female thusly attired: Black silk stockings reaching to her thighs, and a tight-fitting red bodice without sleeves, and a very short tunic of red belted with black and a black border around her tunic. Her arms were bare to the shoulder, and her head was bare. She had two male attendants, who were bare-armed, bare-breasted and bare-legged. With a swagger the female walked through the hot sand, and, after allowing the spectators to view her standing for twenty minutes, she sat down on the sand, and the men did the same. For full half an hour they sat browning themselves in the sun and warming up for the bath. The tide was out and the water shallow for a great distance; the three figures walked on, and on, until they reached the large breakers, and then she vaulted through the surf like a circus rider going through the paper balloons. The trio performed many circus feats for the amusement of the large audience. Then they came out and sat on the sands; one of the men stretched himself out, and the female proceeded to bury him; she soon had him covered from neck to toes, and then stood over him kicking the sand in a higher heap; she would run in and out of the water and cut all sorts of antics on the sand. Two hours were devoted to this sport and I left.

Who or what she is I don't know, but she did her part toward affording a Fourth of July free performance to a large and severely critical audience.

Two young girls chased each other out of the water and in conspicuous bathing suits wrestled on the beach, until one succeeded in throwing down the other; then she laid full length on her, and tried to force sand in her mouth. The under one struggled and shrieked, but the one on top held her down until she filled her mouth with sand. This gave desperate strength to the under one and she succeeded in getting her opponent down and serving her with the same repast, then released her and ran into the water. These girls only thought of having a bit of fun, but, before this era, would modest girls romp in such attire before such a promiscuous crowd? Another girl came out of the water and threw herself, face downward, on the sand and kicked up her heels in the air. Formerly young ladies protected their complexions from tan and sunburn; now the tom-boys and hoydens try to brown their arms, hands and faces. After two hours in the water, and on the hot sands, they are as red as their dresses, their parasols and their ribbons.

Doing a Smart Thing.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A few days ago an eminent citizen of Detroit, or at least one eminent enough to own a $7 umbrella, left the article in a store on Gratiot street and some one gobbled it. Eminent citizen was thoroughly indignant, and he went to a detective to see what could be done. As there was no clew to pick up and follow to success, the detective could do nothing. All of a sudden a bright thought occurred to the loser, and next day an advertisement appeared as follows:

"The man who took that silk umbrella from a store on Gratiot street last Thursday will save himself trouble by returning it, as he is known."

Eminent citizen was chuckling over his smartness when a man dressed like a laborer and having an umbrella carefully tied up in paper entered the office and said:

"So you knew me, eh?"

"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply.

"Somebody must have seen me take it and told you?"

"Yes, that was the way."

"What would you have done if I hadn't shown up?"

"Secured a warrant and made it hot for you."

"Well, give me a receipt and I'll leave it and never try to get away with another man's umbrella."

A receipt was written and passed over, and the man seemed so contrite that he was handed a half dollar besides. It was a full half day before the parcel was unwrapped for a look at the umbrella, and then eminent citizen kicked up a row to alarm the whole building. The umbrella was old, faded, ribbon and worthless, and it was evidently a put up job to take the smartness out of a man who thought he had hit it.

HAD MET BEFORE.

The Mutual Recognition of a Divorced Couple at the Seaside.

Atlantic City Cor. Chicago Tribune.

At the Waverly the other day, as it is reported, a man from St. Louis was introduced to a woman living in New York, and though he did not remember her name her face seemed familiar. He told her so, and, after more conversation, he was more and more confident he had met her before. He drubbed his memory for some time, to no purpose, and finally concluded that it was an accidental resemblance to some forgotten friend. When he had said this, she laughed, and remarked: "You are right in your surmises. You have met me before. I used to be a friend of yours."

He—Indeed? Where have we met?
She—At the altar.
He—At the altar? What altar?
She—The nuptial altar?
He—Absurd.
She—Yes; it may have been absurd, but it is a fact, nevertheless. Don't you know me? I used to be your wife.
He—But your name is Mrs. Simpkins.
She—Yes; Simpkins is the name of my last husband.
He—How many husbands have you had?
She—Since I left you?
He—Yes; since I left you.
She—Only three.
He—Your hair was black when — when — we concluded to dissolve. Now it is yellow.
She—Dye!
He—You were formerly slight. Now you look rather—rather—stout.
She—So I am. I weigh 170 pounds, and am rapidly increasing. Simpkins doesn't worry me as much as you did. Content makes flesh. Anything more?
He—Your face is prettier than I remember it. Your complexion is improved.
She—Glad you appreciate my art. No woman of the world has any excuse for being plain. Good looks are purchaseable now-a-days.
He—You are an extraordinary woman.
She—Not at all. I am only a woman of the day. Now let me question you awhile? Have you been married again?
He—Yes.
She—How many times?
He—Twice.
She—Are you a husband now?
He—No; I am a widower.
She—What a pity!
He—It is sad.
She—I don't mean that. I mean that it is a pity you were deprived of the fun of getting another divorce. I like it, don't you? Are you engaged again?
He—Not yet. In fact, my last wife died only a month ago. Some respect must be paid.
She—Very true. But don't be in haste. Keep disengaged a while longer. Simpkins is in Egypt. They have the cholera there, you know, very badly. No one can tell what may happen. I shall have letters from Egypt in three days. Wait a little. We might agree better next time.

THERE will be opened on Monday morning at D. Crawford & Co.'s a fresh lot of sea-grass and blue-grass hammocks, at less than manufacturers' prices.

FRENCH ARTICHOKES.

Some of the Delicacies that France Sends Us.

From the New York Morning Journal.

The French artichoke is beginning to be cultivated here with some success, but as a rule it will only do well in hot-houses, or, at least, hot-beds. Our winters are too severe for them, though they show a disposition to become hardy. They take a long time to come to perfection. For instance, artichokes planted in March or April will grow slowly all summer, but produce nothing. They must be covered with litter, and then in the following spring transplanted. The second summer they will produce the large, green thistle which is so much appreciated of bon vivants.

Americans know, as a rule, little of the artichoke. They ought to know more, for it is a delicious thing. In France, though always a luxury, it is a common enough article of diet. It grows plentifully there in any soil, but is found in perfection toward the centre of France. By all means the best way of eating it is to have a little plain salad dressing prepared with more than a usual quantity of pepper. The artichoke should be thoroughly cold. Each leaf is pulled off separately, the fattest end steeped in the dressing and bitten off until all the leaves are finished. Then cut off the hairy thistle-like substance and devote yourself to the heart of the fruit, dipping it in the dressing. It is most delicious.

Broadway fruiterers sell artichokes, mostly imported, at three for a dollar during the season. They are sometimes dearer, seldom if ever any cheaper.

At Delmonico's the artichoke is a favorite dish with the regular customers. It is eaten in a separate course usually. Where two sit down to a full dinner one artichoke is sufficient. The price is 60 cents, and as a rule they are larger and better than the ones which may be bought in the stores. Delmonico imports them expressly and direct.

Religious Toleration.

From the Baltimore Sun.

In Mr. Gladstone's preface to "Rome and the Newest Fashions in Religion" he states that the Maryland act of toleration seems to have been the echo of an order of the House of Commons of 1645 and of a British ordinance of 1647. Gen. Johnson, in his "Foundation of Maryland," attacks this statement of Mr. Gladstone's, and proves by the original authorities that no such ordinance was passed, and that the long Parliament never in any manner favored religious toleration. He forwarded a copy of the book to Mr. Gladstone, and yesterday received the following note from him:

10 DOWNING STREET,
WHITEHALL, June 30, 1883.

SIR—I offer my best thanks for your kindness in sending me your interesting work on "The Foundation of Maryland," which reached me this day, and which I have at once begun to examine. Allow me to assure you with reference to passages of mine which you have quoted that I have had no intention beyond that of drawing notice to some partial but very significant information which had recently come to light. I do not hold the opinion that the Protestants or the Puritans of that day were convinced friends of freedom of conscience or practiced it in England. I have the honor to remain, with renewed thanks, your most obedient and faithful W. E. GLADSTONE.

"SHE LOVED ME FOR MYSELF."

Amidst the roses, lo! my dear wife stands,
Herself the fairest, sweetest flower of all,
I think, as from her slender, snow-white hands
She lets the honey-petaled blossoms fall.

Amidst the roses while the daylight pales,
Our home stands golden in the setting sun;
And 'neath our vine-wreathed porch she never fails
To give me welcome when the day is done.

And when I meet her happy, love-lit eyes,
I know it cannot be through sordid pelf
That I have won my life's most precious prize—
She loved and took me simply for—myself!

Amidst the roses, lo! my darling stands!
Herself the sweetest, fairest flower of all.
I think, as from her slender, snow-white hands
She lets the honey-petaled blossoms fall.

CHAPTER I.

THE NOCTURNAL VISIT.

* * * Whence is that knocking?
How is't with me when every sound appalls me?
* * * I hear a knocking
In the south entry! Hark!—more knocking!
SHAKESPEARE.

Hurricane Hall is a large old family mansion, built of dark, red sandstone, in one of the loneliest and wildest of the mountain regions of Virginia.

The estate is surrounded on three sides by a range of steep, gray rocks, spiked with clumps of dark evergreens, and called from its horseshoe form the Devil's Hoof.

On the fourth side the ground gradually descends in broken rock and barren soil to the edge of the wild mountain stream known as the Devil's Run.

When storms and floods were high, the loud roaring of the wind through the wild mountain gorges, and the terrific raging of the torrent over its rocky course, gave to this savage locality its ill-omened names of Devil's Hoof, Devil's Run and Hurricane Hall.

Major Ira Warfield, the lonely proprietor of the Hall, was a veteran officer, who, in disgust at what he supposed to be ill-requited services, had retired from public life to spend the evening of his vigorous age on his patrimonial estate. Here he lived in seclusion, with his old-fashioned housekeeper, Mrs. Condiment, and his old family servants, and his favorite dogs and horses.

In person Major Warfield was tall and strongly built, like some iron-limbed Douglas of the olden time.

In character Major Warfield was arrogant, domineering and violent; equally loved and feared by his faithful old family servants at home; disliked and dreaded by his neighbors and acquaintances abroad, who, partly from his house and partly from his character, fixed upon him the appropriate nickname of "Old Hurricane."

There was, however, other grounds of aversion besides that of his arrogant mind, violent temper and domineering habits. Old Hurricane was said to be an old bachelor, yet rumor whispered that there was in some obscure part of the world, hidden away from human sight, a deserted wife and child, poor, forlorn and heartbroken. It was further whispered that the older brother of Ira Warfield had mysteriously disappeared, and not without some suspicion of foul play on the part of the only person in the world who had a strong interest in his "taking off." However these things might be, it was known for a certainty that Old Hurricane had on only sister, widowed, sick and poor, who, with her son, dragged on a wretched life of ill-requited toil, severe privation and painful infirmity, in a distant city, unaided, unsought, uncared for by her cruel brother.

It was the night of the last day of October, 1845. The evening had closed in dark and gloomy. About dusk the wind arose in the northwest, driving up masses of leaden-hued clouds, and in a few minutes the ground was covered deep with snow and the air was filled with driving sleet.

As this was All Hallow Eve, the dreadful inclemency of the weather did not prevent the negroes of Hurricane Hall from availing themselves of their capricious old master's permission, and going off in a body to a banjo break-down held in the quarters of their next neighbor.

Upon this evening, then, there was left at the hall only Maj Warfield, Mrs. Condiment, his little old housekeeper, and Wool, his body-servant.

Early in the evening the old house was shut up closely to keep out as much as possible the sound of the storm that roared through the mountain chasms, and cannonaded the walls as if determined to force an entrance. As soon as she had seen that all was safe, Mrs. Condiment went to bed and to sleep.

It was about ten o'clock that night that Old Hurricane, wrapped up in his quilted flannel dressing-gown, sat in his padded arm-chair before a warm and bright fire, taking his ease in his own bedroom. This was the hour of the coziest enjoyment to the self-indulgent Sybarite. And, indeed, every means and appliance of bodily comfort was at hand. Strong oaken shutters, and thick, heavy curtains at the windows, kept out every draft of air, and so deadened the sound of the wind that its subdued moaning was just sufficient to remind one of the stormy weather without in contrast to the bright warmth within. Old Hurricane, as I said, sat well wrapped up in his wadded dressing-gown, reclining in his padded easy-chair, with his head thrown back, and his feet up on the fire-irons, toasting his shins and sipping his punch.

On his left hand stood his cozy bedstead, with its warm crimson curtains festooned back, revealing the luxurious swell of the full feather bed, and pillows with their snow-white linen and lambswool blankets inviting repose. Between this bedstead and the corner of the fire-place stood Old Hurricane's ancient body-servant, Wool, engaged in warming a crimson cloth night-cap.

"I take this," said Old Hurricane, as he sipped his punch and smacked his lips—"I take this to be the very quintessence of human enjoyment—sitting here in my soft, warm chair before the fire, toasting my legs, sipping my punch, listening on the one hand to the storm without, and glancing on the other hand at my comfortable bed waiting there to receive my sleepy head.

"I wonder now if there is anything on the face of the earth that would tempt me to leave my cozy fireside and go abroad to-night? I wonder how large a promise of pleasure or profit or glory it would take now?"

"Much as ebber Congress itse'f could give if it give you a penance for all your sarvins," suggested Wool.

"Yes, and more! for I wouldn't leave my home comforts to-night to insure not only the pension but the thanks of Congress," said the old man, replenishing his glass with steaming punch and drinking it off leisurely.

The clock struck eleven. The old man again filled his glass, and while sipping its contents said:

"You may fill the warming-pan and warm my bed, Wool. The fumes of this fragrant punch are beginning to rise to my head and make me sleepy."

The servant filled the warming-pan with glowing embers, shut down the lid and thrust it between the sheets to heat the couch of the luxurious Old Hurricane. The old man continued to toast his feet, sip his punch and smack his lips. He finished his glass, set it down, and was just in the act of drawing on his woolen night-cap preparatory to stepping into his well-warmed bed, when he was suddenly startled by a loud ringing of the hall door-bell.

"What the foul fiend can that mean at this time of night?" exclaimed Old Hurricane, dropping his night-cap and turning sharply around towards Wool, who, warming-pan in hand, stood staring with astonishment. "What does that mean, I ask you?"

"Dead, I dunno, sar, less it's some benighted trabeller in search o' shelter out'n de storm."

"Humph! and in search of supper, too, of course, and everybody gone away or gone to bed but you and me."

At this moment the ringing was followed by a loud knocking.

"Marse, don't le's you an' me listen to it, and then we aint 'bliged to sturb ourselves wid answering of it," suggested Wool.

"What, sir! do you think that I am going to turn a deaf ear to a stranger that comes to my house for shelter on such a night as this? Go and answer the bell directly."

"Yes, sar."

"But stop—look here—mind I am not to be disturbed. If it is a traveller, ask him in; set refreshments before him, show him to bed. I'm not going to leave my warm room to welcome anybody to-night, please the Lord. Do you hear?"

"Yes, sar," said the darkey, retreating.

As Wool took a shaded taper and opened the door leading from his master's chamber, the wind was heard howling through the long passages ready to burst into the cozy bedroom.

"Shut the door, you scoundrel!" roared Old Hurricane, folding the skirt of his warm dressing-gown across his knees, and hovering closer to the fire.

Wool quickly obeyed and was heard retreating down the steps.

"Whew!" said the old man, spreading his hands over the blaze with a look of comfortable appreciation. "What would induce me to go abroad on such a night as this? Winds blowing great guns from the northwest—snow falling fast from the heavens, and rising just as fast before the wind from the ground!—cold as Lapland, dark as Erebus! No telling the earth from the sky. Whew!" and to comfort the cold thought, Old Hurricane poured out another glass of smoking punch, and began to sip it.

"How I thank the Lord that I am not a doctor! If I were a doctor now, the sound of that bell at this hour of the night would frighten me; I should think some old woman had been taken with the pleurisy, and wanted me to get up and go out in the storm—to turn out of my warm bed to ride ten miles through the snow to prescribe for her. A doctor never can feel sure, even in the worst of weathers, of a good night's rest. But, thank heaven, I am free from all such annoyances, and if I am sure of anything in this world it is of my comfortable sleep," said Old Hurricane, as he sipped his punch, smacked his lips and toasted his feet.

At this moment, Wool reappeared.

"Shut the door, you villain! Do you intend to stand there holding it open on me all night?" vociferated the old man.

Wool hastily closed the offending portals, and hurried to his master's side.

"Well, sir, who was it rang the bell?"

"Please, marster, sir, it wer' de Reberend Mr. Parson Goodwin."

"Goodwin? Been to make a sick-call, I suppose, and got caught in the snow-storm. I declare it is as bad to be a parson as it is to be a doctor! Thank the Lord I am not a parson, either! If I were, now, I might be called away from my cosy arm-chair and fireside to ride twelve miles to comfort some old man dying of quinsy. Wool, here—help me into bed; pile on more comforters, tuck me up warm, put a bottle of hot water to my feet, and then go and attend to the parson," said the old man, getting up and moving towards his inviting couch.

"Sar! sar! stop, sar, if you please!" cried Wool, going after him.

"Why, what does the old fool mean?" exclaimed Old Hurricane, angrily.

"Sar, de Reverend Mr. Parson Goodwin say how he must see you yourself, personable, alone."

"See me, you villain! Didn't you tell him that I had retired?"

"Yes, marse, I tell him how you wer' gone to bed and asleep more'n an hour ago, and he ordered me to come wake you up, and say how it were a matter o' life and death."

"Life and death! What have I to do with life and death? I won't stir! If the parson wants to see me, he will have to come up here!" exclaimed Old Hurricane, suiting the action to the word by jumping into bed and drawing all the comforters and blankets up around his head and shoulders.

"Mus' I fetch his reberence up, sah?"

"Yes. I wouldn't get up and go down to see—Washington. Shut the door, you rascal, or I'll throw the bootjack at your wooden head!"

Wool obeyed with alacrity and in time to escape the threatened missile.

After an absence of a few minutes he was heard returning, attending upon the footsteps of another. And the next minute he entered, ushering in the Rev. Mr. Goodwin, the parish minister of St. Mary's.

"How do you do? How do you do? Glad to see you, sir! glad to see you, though obliged to receive you in bed! Fact is, I caught a cold with this severe change of weather, and took a warm negus and got to bed to sweat it off. You'll excuse me! Wool, draw that easy-chair up to my bedside for worthy Mr. Goodwin, and bring him a glass of warm negus. It will do him good after his cold ride."

"I thank you, Maj. Warfield. I will take the seat, but not the negus, if you please, to-night."

"Not the negus? Oh, come now, you are joking! Why, it will keep you from catching cold, and be a most comfortable night-cap, disposing you to sleep and sweat like a baby. Of course you spend the night with us?"

"I thank you, no. I must take the road again in a few minutes."

"Take the road again to-night! Why, man alive, it is midnight, and the snow driving like all Lapland."

"Sir, I am sorry to refuse your proffered hospitality, and leave your comfortable roof to-night, and sorrier still to have to take you with me," said the pastor gravely.

"Take ME with you! No, no, my good sir—no, no, that is too great a joke—ha! ha!"

"Sir, I fear that you will find it a very serious one! Your servant told you that my errand was one of imminent urgency?"

"Yes, something like life and death—"

"Exactly. Down in the cabin near the Punch Bowl there is an old woman dying—"

"There! I knew it. I was just saying there might be an old woman dying. But, my dear sir, what's that to me? What can I do?"

"Humanity, sir, would prompt you."

"But, my dear sir, how can I help her? I am not a physician to prescribe—"

"She is far past a physician's help."

"Nor am I a priest to hear her confession—"

"Her confession God has already received."

"Well, and I'm not a lawyer to draw up her will."

"No sir; but you were recently appointed one of the Justices of the Peace for Alleghany?"

"Yes. Well, what of that? That does not comprise the duty of getting up out of my warm bed and going through a snow-storm to see an old woman expire."

"I regret to inconvenience you, sir; but in this instance your duty demands your attendance at the bedside of this dying woman—"

"I tell you I can't go, and won't. Anything in reason I'll do. Anything I can send she shall have—Here! Wool, look in my breeches pocket and take out my purse and hand it to me. And then go and wake up Mrs. Condiment, and ask her to fill a large basket full of everything a poor old dying woman might want, and you shall carry it."

"Spare your pains, sir. The poor woman is already past all earthly, selfish wants. She only asks your presence at her dying bed."

"But I can't go! I! the idea of turning out of my warm bed and exposing myself to a snow-storm this time of night?"

"Excuse me for insisting, sir: but this is an official duty," said the parson mildly, but firmly.

"I'll—I'll throw up my commission to-morrow," growled the old man.

"To-morrow you may do that, but meanwhile, to-night, being still in the commission of the peace, you are bound to get up and go with me to this woman's bedside."

"And what the demon is wanted of me there?"

"To receive her dying deposition."

"To receive a dying deposition! Good heaven! was she murdered, then?" exclaimed the old man in alarm, as he started out of bed and began to draw on his nether garments.

"Be composed—she was not murdered," said the pastor.

"Well, then, what is it? Dying deposition! It must concern a crime!" exclaimed the old man, hastily drawing on his coat.

"It does concern a crime."

"What crime, for the love of heaven?"

"I am not at liberty to tell you. She will do that."

"Wool, go down and rouse up Jehu, and tell him to put Parson Goodwin's mule in the stable for the night. And tell him to put the black draught horse to the close carriage, and light both the front lanterns, for we shall have a dark, stormy road—SHUT THE DOOR, you infernal—I beg your pardon, parson, but that villain always leaves the door ajar after him."

The good pastor bowed gravely. And the Major completed his toilet by the time the servant returned and reported the carriage ready.

"The Devil's Punch Bowl!" was the order given by Old Huricane, as he followed the minister into the carriage. "And now, sir," he continued, addressing his companion, "I think you had better repeat that part of the church litany that prays to be delivered from 'battle, murder and sudden death;' for if we should be so lucky as to escape Black Donald and his gang, we shall have at least an equal chance of being upset in the darkness of these dreadful mountains." The above we publish as a specimen chapter; but the continuation of this great story will be found only in the N. Y. Ledger. The Hidden Hand is the most popular story we ever published, and Capitola, its spirited and attractive heroine, is the greatest favorite of all heroines. Ask for the number dated July 28, which can now be had at any news office or book-store. If you are not within reach of of a news office you can have that number of the Ledger mailed to you by sending six cents (postage stamps will do) to Robert Bonner, publisher, 182 William street, New York.

A Mother's Dream.

From the Dubuque (Ia.) Times.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Damon, of Wauwatosa, Wis., have for two weeks been visiting in the city, guests of Mrs. Francis Lawrence. Mr. Damon, Mrs. Lawrence's cousin, is secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association at his home, and a week ago Sunday conducted the gospel meeting of that organization in this city. The severe storm of the night of the 3d and the threatened storm of the morning of the 4th prevented Mr. Damon and his friends from taking an excursion into the country, and in the afternoon they rode back and forth on the street-cars, having a merry time. Just after six they entered the house laughing about the afternoon experience, and were met by the telegram: "Your son Willis is killed by lightning." Willis was married last April, and was an only child. A singular circumstance can be briefly related. Its truth can easily be proven; the conclusions are left to the reader. When Mrs. Damon came down to breakfast on the morning of the 4th, she appeared somewhat anxious and said: "Oh, I had such a bad dream; I thought a little boy who lives near us at home was killed by lightning, and some one else was killed in whom we were interested. I could not make out who it was, but they were trying to get the body to us, and there was some trouble about the cars." Her friends told her the dream of death meant a wedding, and laughed her into brighter thoughts. The telegram with the sad news came about twelve hours after the dream.

NO COMPROMISE.

Chas. P. Johnson Talks About High License and the Sunday Law.

Ex-Gov. Chas. P. Johnson has just returned from a visit to Kansas City, and while there he was interviewed by a representative of the Times on the Downing law and prohibition. In this interview he declares that the prohibitionists are in no sense satisfied with the high license law, and that they will be satisfied with no compromise. With respect to the outcome of the law he says it will be a failure, especially in St. Louis, because wine and beer saloons have been exempted from the operation of it, and hence the whole matter is left where it stood before the law went into effect. As to the Sunday closing question, Mr. Johnson is emphatic in his opinion that the law should be enforced, and declares that if Gov. Crittenden carries out his determination it will be the best act of his administration. Officers of the law who will not or cannot do their duties in this respect should resign or be kicked out. He scorns the presumption of saloon men in placing themselves on the same basis with bakeries and other business and concludes that the whole effect of the saloon opposition and affrontery, and the failure of the law, will be to bring about the ultimate success of practical prohibition in Missouri.

The New Wentworth.

Newcastle, New Hampshire, has for years been one of New England's most popular seashore resorts, and is known far and wide through "the Wentworth," which has long enjoyed the reputation of being a perfect hotel. Hon. Frank Jones of Portsmouth, N. H., a wealthy gentleman of great enterprise and public spirit, is determined to make "the Wentworth" the largest and best appointed seashore house in this country; and under the liberal and skillful management of Mr. George F. Thompson it will be conducted in a manner that will challenge the admiration of all visitors. The present Wentworth is 225 feet in length. An addition of 425x50 feet will be made, running out toward the cottage annex now standing eastward of the main building. When finished its frontage will be 650 feet, and it will have a continuous veranda walk twelve feet wide for upward of 2,300 feet, or nearly half a mile in length. The addition will contain 413 new rooms, making the entire number of rooms available for guests in the hotel 680. Of the new rooms, every one will have a parlor and alcove attachment for bed place, and each room will have a fireplace, curiously fashioned, according to the plan. There are a dozen other improvements contemplated on a grand scale, a ladies' billiard hall, a new dining hall, new hot and cold salt water bath-houses, and every imaginable appurtenance for the comfort and convenience of guests.

KEEP cool is now the order of the day. You can fill the bill by investing in one of those handsome water-coolers to be had so cheap at D. Crawford & Co.'s.

Louisiana, Mo.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISIANA, Mo., July 14.—The most damaging wind and rain storm for years visited Louisiana and vicinity on Friday afternoon, commencing a little after four o'clock and lasting an hour, during which time the wind was terrific and the rain fell in torrents, causing considerable loss of property. The most serious was the destruction of the Colored Methodist Church, a frame structure, costing about $2,500, and comparatively a new building. It is a total loss. The M. E. Church, South, building was partially unroofed and otherwise damaged. Parks' new brick building, in course of construction, had the front wall blown in and considerably damaged. The Tinsley Tobacco Manufacturing Company's large brick building was partly unroofed. The Freeman box factory had its smoke-stack blown down and building injured. E. M. Craig's dwelling house was very badly wrecked. The La Crosse Lumber Company had a raft break loose, but it was secured in a damaged condition, and much lumber was scattered in every direction through their yard. Nearly every place in town suffered to a greater or less extent by the loss of fences, fruit and shade trees and damage to buildings, and the loss in the aggregate is considerable.——Farmers have commenced threshing their wheat and find the crop better than they anticipated.——Corn is looking fine and improving very fast, oats and grass never better.——Fruit crop will be light.——Capt. Joplin, Mo.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., July 14.—The rain-storm which visited this section last night was the heaviest since 1874. The damage to mines and mining property is very great. All the wash places have been carried away, and hundreds of shafts flooded. Crops have probably suffered severely, as very little wheat has been stacked. The trains on all the roads, except the Gulf, has been delayed. The new bridge on Broadway, built at a cost to the city of nearly $4,000, is ruined. The middle pier, which stood in the center of a tremendous current, was built on the loose gravel, which soon washed out, precipitating the brick arches and wall into the stream. A breakwater built at a cost of $50 would probably have saved it this time. Willow Branch, which crosses Main street between Fifth and Sixth, left its banks and spread out a block in width, rising in some of the houses to the depth of four and five feet, doing a large amount of damage. Among the heaviest losers are Charles Babst, drugs; C. F. Krauch, boots and shoes; Wolf, boots and shoes; Sam Pealer, saloon; C. Scherl, confectionery, and Workizer & Wheeler, drugs.

SPORTING NEWS.

Base Ball and Other Events—Notes and Gossip.

The long-talked of game between the St. Louis and Cincinnati clubs took place yesterday and proved a disappointment, so far as the hopes of the St. Louis supporters were concerned. The home team began the game with a number of costly and inexcusable errors, their batting was weak, their base-running miserable, and altogether, judged by yesterday's game alone, the Browns are no match at all for the champion Cincinnatis. The score was: Cincinnati, 4; St. Louis, 1. The run made by the home nine was the merest stratch. Mansell, who scored, was hit by a batted ball while running to second, and was properly out, but the umpire decided otherwise, and while the Cincinnatis, headed by "Baby" Jones, were indulging in a big "kick," Mansell came home. Base hits: Cincinnatis, 5; St. Louis, 4. Errors: Cincinnatis, 4; St. Louis 6. Runs earned: Cincinnatis, 1.

The Eclipse and Columbus clubs played an exhibition game at Louisville yesterday, Daniels, the official umpire, not having arrived to umpire the game. The Louisville boys played without an error, and defeated their opponents by a score of 4 to 0.

On Saturday the Browns won a hard-played game from the Columbus by a score of 8 to 7, the winning run being made in the ninth inning. Base hits: St. Louis, 12; Columbus, 10. Errors: St. Louis, 7; Columbus, 5. Runs earned: Columbus, 5; St. Louis, 3.

The Cincinnatis, on Saturday, defeated the Louisvilles by a score of 9 to 3. Base hits: Cincinnatis, 12; Louisvilles, 7. Errors: Cincinnatis, 3; Louisvilles, 4.

The Allegheny club at home played a great game with the Athletics and were defeated in 10 innings by a score of 3 to 2. Base hits: Alleghenies, 10; Athletics, 9. Errors: Alleghenies, 2; Athletics, 3. Runs earned: 1 each.

The Baltimores, at home, defeated the Metropolitans by a score of 3 to 2. Base hits, Baltimores 7, Mets 3; errors, Baltimores 4, Mets 2.

The following were the results of Saturday's League games: At New York, New York 11, Buffalo 8; at Chicago, Chicago 4, Providence 3; at Detroit, Detroit 5, Boston 2; at Cleveland, Cleveland 9, Philadelphia 2.

WE SHOULD HELP ONE ANOTHER.

Mr. NORMAN HUNT, of No. 169 Chestnut street, Springfield, Mass., writes April 10, 1883, saying:

"Having the affliction caused by kidney and liver diseases, and after enduring the aches, pains, weakness, and depression incident thereto until body and soul were nearly distracted, I sought for relief and a cure from my trouble, and was told by a friend who had been cured by it himself, that the best and only sure cure was Hunt's Remedy, and upon his recommendation I commenced taking it, and the first few doses improved my condition in a very marked manner, and a continuance of its use has justified all that my friends claimed for it—that it was a sure and permanent cure for all diseases of the kidneys and liver. Several of my friends in Springfield have used it with the most gratifying results, and I feel it my duty as well as a pleasure to me to recommend Hunt's Remedy in the highest possible terms."

MANUFACTURER'S TESTIMONY.

Mr. H. W. PAYNE, manufacturer of harness, saddlery, trunks, valises, etc., No. 477 Main street, Springfield, Mass., writes us under date of April 10, 1883:

"GENTLEMEN—I have used Hunt's Remedy, the best medicine for diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder, and urinary organs, and have received great benefit to my health from its use, and I find that it will do just what is claimed for it; it will cure disease and restore health. I therefore pronounce it the best medicine that I have ever used."

LESSONS IN NATURAL HISTORY.

THE GOAT

BY THE JUDGE.

"The last time I undertook to read a lesson in natural history," remarked the Judge, looking severely over the top of his gold-rimmed spectacles, "the members of the committee rendered themselves liable for contempt by falling asleep during the remarks of the Chairman. It is true the weather was a little warm, and there had been a picnic the day before, attended in a body by the members of this committee, during which much 'Gambrinus' fluid was disposed of, and, taking this into consideration, the fine will only be $1 all around, the amount to be turned into the Health Department, that the sanitary condition of the city may be improved. The subject of eulogy to-day will be that energetic and useful animal, the Goat—classified zoologically as 'a mammiferous quadruped of the genus capri,' but better known, perhaps, to the world at large as the 'billy goat.' Life is too short," continued the Judge, "and the thermometer too high to waste time in tracing the pedigree of this remarkable animal back to the starting point, but the fact is well established that the man who discovered the goat is—well dead. We will simply mention a few of the characteristics that render him so useful to man: It is a well-known fact that the goat has an appetite that stops at nothing; he devours with evident relish everything that comes in his way, from a tenderloin steak to an oyster can or section of stove pipe, and considers scrap-iron a choice tidbit on his bill of fare. It will be seen from this that he is not troubled with indigestion. The goat is an aggressive animal, and never hesitates to attack anything with his front end from Jumbo to a locomotive; he even has the temerity to tackle a Missouri cyclone; the only thing that ever caused him to hesitate being the Mayor's slate—he found that all sixes and sevens, and wildly fled. The goat, when, in his native fastness, inhabits mountainous climes, inaccessible to the foot of man. There, from his dignified altitude, he gazes down on the world with calm philosophy. Wars and rumors of wars disturb him not; and questions of finance, or who'll be the next Republican nominee for President, agitate not his peaceful dreams as he gazes along the edges of precipices and looks at the sun from towering peaks. He seldom ventures in the valleys, and is known as the 'strongest butter' in creation." Just at this point the Judge, perceiving evidences of drowsiness stealing over the committee, adjourned the meeting. They formed in line, headed by their venerable Chairman, and sought the great Arctic Fountain at FAMOUS, each man drinking a health to the "Goat."
